

ANTHONY BANDIERO, ESQ.

NEW YORK

Search & Seizure Survival Guide

A FIELD GUIDE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

 Blue to Gold

New York Search & Seizure Survival Guide

A FIELD GUIDE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

Anthony Bandiero, JD, ALM

Blue To Gold Law Enforcement Training, LLC
SPOKANE,
WASHINGTON

ADDITIONAL RESOURCES

FREE WEEKLY WEBINARS

VISIT WWW.BLUETOGOLD.COM/CALENDAR FOR MORE DETAILS

ASK THE EXPERT!

Submit your questions

bluetogold.com/show

ON-DEMAND COURSE AVAILABLE

VISIT WWW.UNIVERSITY.BLUETOGOLD.COM FOR MORE DETAILS

BlueToGold

Copyright © 2024 by Anthony Bandiero.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, distributed or transmitted in any form or by any means, including photocopying, recording, or other electronic or mechanical methods, without the prior written permission of the publisher, except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical reviews and certain other noncommercial uses permitted by copyright law. For permission requests, write to the publisher, addressed "Attention: Permissions Coordinator," at the address below.

Blue to Gold, LLC
12402 N Division St #119
Spokane, WA 99218
info@bluetogold.com
www.bluetogold.com

Ordering Information:

Quantity sales. Special discounts are available on quantity purchases by government agencies, police associations, and others. For details, contact us at the address above.

New York Search & Seizure Survival Guide
ISBN 978-1699668931
Last updated 08-30-2024

Note: This is a general overview of the classical and current United States court decisions related to search and seizure, liability, and confessions. As an overview, it should be used for a basic analysis of the general principles but not as a comprehensive presentation of the entire body of law. It is not to be used as a substitute for the opinion or advice of the appropriate legal counsel from the reader's department. To the extent possible, the information is current. However, very recent statutory and case law developments may not be covered.

Additionally, readers should be aware that all citations in this book are meant to give the reader the necessary information to find the relevant case. Case citations do not comply with court requirements and intentionally omit additional information such as pin cites, internal citations, and subsequent case developments. The citations are intended for police officers. Lawyers must conduct due diligence and read the case completely and cite appropriately.

Overview

Note about case citations:

The case names cited throughout this book are not formatted according to the Bluebook citation style, which is widely recognized in legal writing. Instead, these citations are presented in a more straightforward manner, primarily to facilitate ease of reference for readers who may wish to delve deeper into the cases themselves. This approach is adopted to enhance the accessibility of the material, especially for those who might not be familiar with the intricacies of legal citation formats. By presenting case names in a clear and direct way, the book aims to encourage readers to explore these cases further, providing a gateway to understanding the legal principles and precedents discussed more deeply.

Table of Contents

"If men were angels, no government would be necessary. If angels were to govern men, neither external nor internal controls on government would be necessary. In framing a government which is to be administered by men over men, the great difficulty lies in this: you must first enable the government to control the governed; and in the next place oblige it to control itself."

— James Madison, Father of the Fourth Amendment, 1788

Consensual Encounters

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Consensual Encounters

The most common police encounter is the consensual one. You don't need a specific reason to speak with people and consensual encounters are a great way to continue an investigation when you have neither reasonable suspicion nor probable cause. As the Supreme Court said, "Police officers act in full accord with the law when they ask citizens for consent."⁶⁸

Start a consensual encounter by asking a question: "Can I talk to you?" Not, "Come talk to me." Also, your conduct during the encounter must be reasonable. Lengthy encounters full of accusatory questioning will likely be deemed an investigative detention, not a consensual encounter.

Finally, your un-communicated state of mind has zero bearing on whether the person would feel free to leave. Therefore, even if you had probable cause to arrest, this factor will not be considered as long as the suspect did not know that you intended to arrest him.

Legal Standard

A consensual encounter becomes a seizure when:⁶⁹

- Under the totality of the circumstances;
- A reasonably innocent person;
- Believes they do not have the freedom to terminate the encounter or leave; and
- Yields to a show of authority or physical force.

Some factors courts consider include:

- How the initial contact was made (was an order given?)
- Use of flashing lights or sirens
- Uniform versus plain clothes

- . Number of officers
- . Demeanor of officer (conversational v. accusations)
- . Display of weapons
- . Physical touching or patdowns
- . Ordering person to move next to patrol car
- . Blocking their vehicle
- . Telling person they are free to leave
- . Reading Miranda (not recommended for consensual encounters)
- . Duration of the encounter
- . Public versus private location
- . And many others. Use common sense and talk to the person in a professional yet conversational tone.

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Consensual Encounters Are Not Seizures:

This case clarified the boundaries of consensual encounters versus seizures under the Fourth Amendment. The Court stated, "law enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment by merely approaching an individual on the street or in another public place, by asking him if he is willing to answer some questions, by putting questions to him if the person is willing to listen, or by offering in evidence in a criminal prosecution his voluntary answers hjnunto such questions." This ruling emphasized that police questioning, in itself, does not constitute a seizure, and such encounters are considered consensual, not implicating Fourth Amendment interests.⁷⁰

Police Can Ask People If They Are Willing To Answer Questions:

The Court reinforced the principle that police interactions with individuals in public spaces, such as streets or buses, where they ask questions or request consent to search luggage, do not violate the Fourth Amendment's prohibition

⁷⁰Florida v. Bostick, 111 S. Ct. 2382 (1991)

of unreasonable seizures. The Court noted, "Law enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable seizures merely by approaching individuals on the street or in other public places and putting questions to them if they are willing to listen." This decision further established that such interactions are considered consensual and do not implicate Fourth Amendment interests.⁷¹

Briefly Asking Factory Workers Questions Was Not A Seizure:

This case examined the nature of interactions between law enforcement officers and individuals, particularly in the context of questioning by officers in a factory setting. The Court's decision turned on the proposition that the interrogations by the INS were merely brief, "consensual encounters," that did not pose a threat to personal security and freedom, and thus did not amount to seizures under the Fourth Amendment.⁷²

Suspect Fit Drug Courier Profile And Police Conduct Was Not A Consensual Encounter:

A suspect who fit the so-called "drug-courier profile" was approached at an airport by two detectives. Upon request, but without oral consent, the suspect produced for the detectives his airline ticket and his driver's license. The detectives, without returning the airline ticket and license, asked the suspect to accompany them to a small room approximately 40 feet away, and the suspect went with them. Without the suspect's consent, a detective retrieved the suspect's luggage from the airline and brought it to the room. When the suspect was asked if he would consent to a search of his suitcases, the suspect produced a key and unlocked one of the suitcases, in which drugs were found. Court found this was not a consensual encounter and suppressed the evidence.⁷³

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Order To Come Over And Talk Is Not Consensual:

⁷¹United States v. Drayton, 122 S. Ct. 2105 (2002)
⁷²INS v. Delgado, 104 S. Ct. 1758 (1984)
⁷³Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983)

Suspect was observed walking in mall parking lot after stores were closed. Officer said, “Come over here, I want to talk to you.” Court held officer gave command to suspect and therefore needed reasonable suspicion. Evidence was suppressed.⁷⁴

Even If Police Have Probable Cause, They Can Still Seek A Consensual Encounter With The Suspect:

“Therefore, even assuming that probable cause existed at some earlier time, there was no violation of the Fourth Amendment...No Fourth Amendment privacy interests are invaded when an officer seeks a consensual interview with a suspect.”⁷⁵

Consensual Encounter And Search Valid After Officer Released Driver Following A Traffic Stop:

Where the officer stopped a vehicle to issue a traffic citation, concluded the traffic stop, indicated to the driver that he was free to leave, but then asked if the driver had drugs and whether or not the officer could search the vehicle, consent to search was voluntary.⁷⁶

Many cops call this move the “two step.” After releasing the offender, the officer will turn towards his patrol car, stop, turn around, and in a Columbo-like manner say, “Sir, can I ask one more question before you leave....” It’s a solid way to separate the stop from the consensual encounter.

Whether Someone Feels “detained” Is Based On Objective Facts:

“The test provides that the police can be said to have seized an individual ‘only if, in view of all of the circumstances surrounding the incident, a reasonable person would have believed that he was not free to leave.’ As the test is an objective standard—looking to a reasonable person’s interpretation of the situation in question... This ‘reasonable person’ standard also ensures that the scope of Fourth Amendment protection does not vary with the state of mind of the particular individual being approached.”⁷⁷

Violation Of A State Law Does Not Equal Automatic Fourth Amendment Violation:

⁷⁴People v. Roth, 219 Cal. App. 3d 211 (Cal. App. 4th Dist. 1990)
⁷⁵People v. Goodington, 23 Cal. 4th 529 (2000), as modified on denial of reh’g (Sep 27, 2000)
⁷⁶S. v. Rivera, 906 F.2d 319 (7th Cir. 1990)
⁷⁷State v. McKellips, 118 Nev. 465, 469 (2002)

Although the officers may have violated state law requirements in not informing the person answering the door during “knock and talk” investigation that he had a right to terminate the encounter, that circumstance did not render the consent to talk involuntary under the Fourth Amendment.⁷⁸

⁷⁸U.S. v. Cormier, 220 F.3d 1103 (9th Cir. 2000)

De Bour Factors

New York has four levels of intrusions, based on their intrusiveness. These are request for information, a common law right of inquiry, detentions, and arrests.

The most common police encounter is the consensual one. You don't need a specific reason to speak with people and consensual encounters are a great way to continue an investigation when you have neither reasonable suspicion nor probable cause. As the Supreme Court said, "Police officers act in full accord with the law when they ask citizens for consent."⁷⁹

Police are permitted to approach an individual "to request information." However, unless there is "founded suspicion" that the individual was engaged in criminal activity you cannot ask accusatory questions or seek consent to search. Start a consensual encounter by asking a question: "Can I talk to you about what you are doing in this building?" (Not "Come talk to me.")

Legal Standard

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Suspect fit drug courier profile and police conduct was not a consensual encounter:

A suspect who fit the so-called "drug-courier profile" was approached at an airport by two detectives. Upon request, but without oral consent, the suspect produced for the detectives his airline ticket and his driver's license. The detectives, without returning the airline ticket and license, asked the suspect to accompany them to a small room

⁷⁹United States v. Drayton, 536 U.S. 194 (U.S. 2002)

approximately 40 feet away, and the suspect went with them. Without the suspect's consent, a detective retrieved the suspect's luggage from the airline and brought it to the room. When the suspect was asked if he would consent to a search of his suitcases, the suspect produced a key and unlocked one of the suitcases, in which drugs were found. Court found this was not a consensual encounter and suppressed the evidence.⁸⁰

No De Bour For Home Contacts, Only Pedestrians & Cars:

“[T]he critical question is not whether the police had a founded suspicion that justified their knocking on defendant's door and asking her whether they could look around her hotel room...Rather, the relevant question to be resolved is whether “[o]ne of the limited exceptions to the warrant requirement and, indeed, to the requirement of probable cause, [applies—] voluntary consent to the search”⁸¹

⁸⁰Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983)
⁸¹People v. Madden, 871 N.Y.S.2d 766 (2009)

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Knock and Talks

There is no Fourth Amendment violation if you try to consensually contact a person at his home. The key to knock and talks is to comply with social norms. Think about it this way, if the Girl Scouts could do it, you can too.

You must be reasonable when you contact the subject. Constant pounding on the door, for example, would likely turn the encounter into a detention if the subject knows that it's the police knocking (an objectively reasonable person would believe that police are commanding him to open the door). Additionally, waking a subject up at 4 a.m. was viewed as a detention requiring reasonable suspicion (see below). In other words, if the Girl Scouts wouldn't do then it's probably unreasonable.

What about "No Trespass" signs? Trying to have a consensual conversation with someone is not typically considered trespassing. The same goes with "No Soliciting" signs. Still, there will be situations when a no-trespassing sign along with other factors will indicate to a reasonable person that no one should approach the front door and knock. Still, these rules don't apply to calls for service where there is an ongoing issue, like a domestic violence call or loud party complaint.

Legal Standard

Knock and talks are lawful when:

- The path used to reach the door does not violate curtilage and appears available for uninvited guests to use;
- If the house has multiple doors, you chose the door reasonably believed to be available for uninvited guests to make contact with an occupant;
- You used typical, non-intrusive methods to contact the occupant, including making contact during a socially-acceptable time;

- Your conversation with the occupant remained consensual;
- When the conversation ended or was terminated, you immediately left and didn't snoop around.

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Knock and Talk Turned to Justified Warrantless Entry Because of Exigent Circumstances:

In U.S. v. Lucas, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held that police officers' warrantless entry into an apartment was justified by exigent circumstances. The officers, conducting a "knock and talk," were initially greeted by an occupant pointing a shotgun at them. When the door was opened a second time, the shotgun was no longer visible, and the defendants had refused to come out, creating an urgent need for action due to potential threats to officer safety. The court stated, "We find no difficulty in concluding that an urgent need to enter the apartment existed because the officers did not know if there were other individuals in the apartment who might be armed and pose a threat to their safety."⁸²

Officers May Knock On The Door Reasonably Believed To Be Used By The General Public:

The U.S. Supreme Court addressed the boundaries of the "knock and talk" exception in law enforcement, particularly focusing on where officers can lawfully approach a residence without a warrant. The case revolved around whether police officers could approach a residence at a location other than the front door under the "knock and talk" exception.

The case involved Officer Carroll, who, while searching for a suspect, approached the Carmans' house and entered their deck without a warrant. The Carmans argued that this violated their Fourth Amendment rights, as the "knock and talk" exception should not apply when officers approach areas of the residence other than the front door. The District Court initially ruled in favor of Carroll, but the Third Circuit Court of Appeals reversed this decision, asserting that the "knock and talk" exception requires officers to begin their encounter at the front door.

⁸²*U.S. v. Lucas*, 462 Fed.Appx. 48 (2d Cir. 2012)

The Supreme Court, however, reversed the Third Circuit's decision, granting qualified immunity to Officer Carroll. The Court emphasized that the "knock and talk" exception allows officers to approach a residence in the same manner as any private citizen might, which includes areas like walkways, driveways, porches, and other places where visitors could be expected to go. The Court noted, "A government official sued under §1983 is entitled to qualified immunity unless the official violated a statutory or constitutional right that was clearly established at the time of the challenged conduct."

The Court's decision highlighted the flexibility of the "knock and talk" exception, allowing law enforcement to approach different parts of a residence, not strictly limited to the front door, as long as those areas are accessible to the general public and used as common entrances. This ruling underscores the balance between law enforcement's need to perform their duties and the protection of individual privacy rights under the Fourth Amendment.⁸³

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Knock And Talk At 4 A.m. Held Invalid:

Officers went to suspect's residence at 4 a.m. with the sole purpose to arrest him. There was no on-going crime and the probable cause was based on an offense that occurred the previous night. This was a violation of knock and talk because officers exceeded social norms.⁸⁴

Command To Open Door Was Not A Consensual Encounter:

"Officers were stationed at both doors of the duplex and [an officer] had commanded [the defendant] to open the door. A reasonable person in [defendant's] situation would have concluded that he had no choice but to acquiesce and open the door."⁸⁵

⁸³Carroll v. Carman, 135 S. Ct. 348 (2014).
⁸⁴United States v. Lundin, 47 F. Supp. 3d 1003 (N.D. Cal. 2014).
⁸⁵United States v. Poe, 462 F.3d 997 (8th Cir. Mo. 2006).

Constant Pressure To Consent To Search Held To Be Unlawful:

During a knock and talk, officers continued to press the defendant for permission to enter and search. Later consent-to-search was the product of an illegal detention.⁸⁶

Officer's Statement That He Didn't Need A Warrant To Talk With Occupant Found To Have Tainted Consent To Enter:

Officers made contact with a suspected alien at his apartment. The officers asked to enter the apartment, and the occupant asked whether they needed a warrant for that. The officers said they "didn't need a warrant to talk to him." Based on the totality of the circumstances, the consent was involuntary, since a reasonable occupant would have thought that police didn't need a warrant to enter and talk.⁸⁷

Unless There Is An Express Order Otherwise, Officers Have The Same Right To Knock And Talk As A Pollster Or Salesman:

"One court stated more than forty years ago: 'Absent express orders from the person in possession against any possible trespass, there is no rule of private or public conduct which makes it illegal per se, or a condemned invasion of the person's right of privacy, for anyone openly and peaceably, at high noon, to walk up the steps and knock on the front door of any man's 'castle' with the honest intent of asking questions of the occupant thereof—whether the questioner be a pollster, a salesman, or an officer of the law.'"⁸⁸

⁸⁶United States v. Washington, 387 F.3d 1060 (9th Cir. Nev. 2004)

⁸⁷Orhorgaghe v. I.N.S., 38 F.3d 488 (9th Cir. 1994)

⁸⁸People v. Rivera, 41 Cal. 4th 304 (2007)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Investigative Activities During Consensual Encounter

Just because you're engaged in a consensual encounter doesn't mean you can't investigate. However, be careful as to how you go about it. Be cool, low key, and relaxed. Make small talk and just present yourself as a curious cop versus someone looking to make an arrest (though that may be your goal).

During a consensual encounter, there are really three investigative activities you can engage in; questioning, asking for ID, and seeking consent to search.

"[L]aw enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment by merely approaching an individual on the street or in another public place, and asking him if he is willing to answer some questions, [or] by putting questions to him if the person is willing to listen."⁸⁹

Asking for ID and running a subject for warrants doesn't automatically convert an encounter into a detention.⁹⁰ Hint, return ID as soon as possible so a reasonable person would still "feel free to leave."⁹¹

Legal Standard

Questioning

Questioning a person does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- Your questions are not overly accusatory in a manner that would make a reasonable person believe they were being detained for criminal activity.

Identification

Asking a person for identification does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

⁸⁹ Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983)

⁹⁰ People v. Bouser, 26 Cal. App. 4th 1280 (1994)

⁹¹ United States v. Chan-Jimenez, 125 F.3d 1324 (9th Cir. Ariz. 1997)

- The identification is requested, not demanded; and
- You returned the identification as soon as practicable; otherwise a reasonable person may no longer feel free to leave.

Consent to search

Asking a person for consent to search does not convert the encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The person's consent was freely and voluntarily given;
- He has apparent authority to give consent to search the area or item; and
- You did not exceed the scope provided, express or implied.

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Consensual Encounters Are Not Seizures:

This case clarified the boundaries of consensual encounters versus seizures under the Fourth Amendment. The Court stated, "law enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment by merely approaching an individual on the street or in another public place, by asking him if he is willing to answer some questions, by putting questions to him if the person is willing to listen, or by offering in evidence in a criminal prosecution his voluntary answers to such questions." This ruling emphasized that police questioning, in itself, does not constitute a seizure, and such encounters are considered consensual, not implicating Fourth Amendment interests.⁹²

Police Can Ask People If They Are Willing To Answer Questions:

The Court reinforced the principle that police interactions with individuals in public spaces, such as streets or buses, where they ask questions or request consent to search luggage, do not violate the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable seizures. The Court noted, "Law enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable seizures merely ⁹²Florida v. Bostick, 111 S. Ct. 2382 (1991).

by approaching individuals on the street or in other public places and putting questions to them if they are willing to listen." This decision further established that such interactions are considered consensual and do not implicate Fourth Amendment interests.⁹³

Briefly Asking Factory Workers Questions Was Not A Seizure:

This case examined the nature of interactions between law enforcement officers and individuals, particularly in the context of questioning by officers in a factory setting. The Court's decision turned on the proposition that the interrogations by the INS were merely brief, "consensual encounters," that did not pose a threat to personal security and freedom, and thus did not amount to seizures under the Fourth Amendment.⁹⁴

Suspect Fit Drug Courier Profile And Police Conduct Was Not A Consensual Encounter:

A suspect who fit the so-called "drug-courier profile" was approached at an airport by two detectives. Upon request, but without oral consent, the suspect produced for the detectives his airline ticket and his driver's license. The detectives, without returning the airline ticket and license, asked the suspect to accompany them to a small room approximately 40 feet away, and the suspect went with them. Without the suspect's consent, a detective retrieved the suspect's luggage from the airline and brought it to the room. When the suspect was asked if he would consent to a search of his suitcases, the suspect produced a key and unlocked one of the suitcases, in which drugs were found. Court found this was not a consensual encounter and suppressed the evidence.⁹⁵

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Child Illegally Questioned At School While Officer Was Present:

A child was illegally seized and questioned by a caseworker and police officer when they escorted the child off private

⁹³ United States v. Drayton, 122 S. Ct. 2105 (2002)
⁹⁴ INS v. Delgado, 104 S. Ct. 1758 (1984)
⁹⁵ Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983)

school property, and interrogated the child for twenty minutes about intimate details of his family life and whether he was being abused. The government argued that this was a consensual encounter, but no reasonable child in that position would have believed they were free to leave.⁹⁶

Note: This case may have come out differently if they did not remove the child from school grounds. Involuntary transportation usually converts an encounter into an arrest.

Consent To Search Was Involuntary After Arrest-like Behavior:

Suspect did not voluntarily consent to the search of his person, and suppression of a handgun discovered was warranted, where the suspect was in a bus shelter, was surrounded by three patrol cars and five uniformed officers, an officer's initial, accusatory question, combined with the police-dominated atmosphere, clearly communicated to the suspect that he was not free to leave or to refuse the officer's request to conduct the search. The officer never informed the suspect that he had the right to refuse the search, and the suspect never gave verbal or written consent, but instead merely surrendered to an officer's command.⁹⁷

⁹⁶Doe v. Heck, 327 F.3d 492 (7th Cir. 2003).

⁹⁷U.S. v. Robertson, 736 F.3d 677 (4th Cir. 2013).

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Asking for Identification

If you make a consensual encounter, you can always request that the subject identify themselves. But remember, there is no requirement that he do so. Additionally, there is likely no crime if the subject lied about his identity during a consensual encounter (however, possession of a fraudulent ID may be a crime).

I know a lot of officers don't understand how a person can lie about his identity and get away with it. But think about it, what law requires a person to identify himself during a consensual encounter? There may be a requirement the suspect identify himself during an investigative detention, but not a consensual one.

On the other hand, lying about ones' identity may help develop reasonable suspicion that the person is engaged in criminal activity, but this can't be the sole reason to detain or arrest the person.

Legal Standard

Asking a person for identification does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The identification is requested, not demanded; and
- You return the identification as soon as practicable; otherwise a reasonable person may no longer feel free to leave.

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Identification Request And Fourth Amendment Reasonableness

In People v. Johnson, the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York ruled on the reasonableness of police officers asking a suspect for identification under the Fourth Amendment, in a high-crime area. The court granted the defendant's motion to suppress the handgun found during the encounter, finding that the police action of seizing the defendant while he was reaching for his ID was unjustified. The court emphasized that mere presence in a high-crime or drug-prone location does not, by itself, provide sufficient cause for police to make such requests. The court stated, "Presence in a high-crime or drug-prone location, without more, does not furnish an objective credible reason for the police to approach an individual and request information."⁹⁸

Detaining A Subject For Identification Requires Reasonable Suspicion:

"When the officers detained [suspect] for the purpose of requiring him to identify himself, they performed a seizure of his person subject to the requirements of the Fourth Amendment."⁹⁹

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Providing A False Name Not A Crime Unless Lawfully Detained Or Arrested:

Defendant's arrest was premised on his giving a false name. The state statute criminalizes a person's false representation or identification of himself or herself to a peace officer "upon a lawful detention or arrest of [that] person" The law applies only where the false identification is given in connection with lawful detention or arrest, and does not apply to consensual encounters with police. Since defendant's subsequent arrest was based upon an unlawful detention, and the search incident to the arrest was likewise unlawful, suppression is required of contraband seized after search incident to unlawful arrest.¹⁰⁰

Asking For Identification, Among Other Activities, Held To Be Consensual:

Where a narcotics officer approached the defendant after she deplaned, identified himself and asked to speak with her; asked for her ticket, which she gave to him; asked for

⁹⁸People v. Johnson, 109 A.D.3d 449 (2013)

⁹⁹Brown v. Tex, 99 S. Ct. 2637 (1979)

¹⁰⁰People v. Walker, 210 Cal. App. 4th 165 (Cal. App. 6th Dist. 2012)

identification, which was produced; asked for permission to search her purse, which she allowed; and asked whether a female officer could pat her down for drugs, to which she agreed; all consents were voluntary even though the defendant was visibly nervous and became more so as the interview progressed.¹⁰¹

Consent To Search For Identification Valid:

Following a patdown of defendant, and after defendant was not “immediately forthright” about his identity, giving only his first name and providing several false dates of birth, the officer asked defendant if he had any identification. Defendant indicated that it could be found in his back pocket. The officer asked for, and was granted, consent to retrieve the identification from defendant's back pocket, but the pocket turned out to be empty. When asked if the identification might be located elsewhere, defendant suggested that it might be in his left front pocket, where the officer found not only an identification card, but what appeared to be cocaine.¹⁰² Double prizes!

Holding Passenger’s Identification While Seeking Consent To Search From Driver, Held To Be An Unlawful Detention:

After stopping a car, the trooper obtained the driver’s license and the passenger’s identification card. After writing the citation, the trooper spoke to the driver outside the car. He handed the driver a citation and his license, but held onto the passenger’s identification. The trooper sought and obtained consent to search. The court held that since the passenger’s ID was still being held, the driver was not truly free to leave and the search was suppressed.¹⁰³

¹⁰¹ U.S. v. Galberth, 846 F.2d 983 (5th Cir. 1988)

¹⁰² U.S. v. Chaney, 647 F.3d 401 (1st Cir. 2011)

¹⁰³ United States v. Macias, 658 F.3d 509, 524 (5th Cir. 2011)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Removing Hands from Pockets

Generally, you may ask a subject to remove his hands from his pockets without worrying about converting the encounter into a detention. Courts understand the importance of officer safety.¹⁰⁴ What if the subject refuses to comply? If you can articulate a legitimate officer safety issue, then ordering a suspect to show his hands may be deemed reasonable.

Moreover, an order to show hands may be considered a minimal interference with a person's freedom and therefore may fall under the "minimal intrusion doctrine."¹⁰⁵ However, I do not recommend ordering a person to show their hands unless you have a legitimate and articulated safety concern.

What if the suspect still refuses to show his hands and tries to leave? Remember, this is a consensual encounter and if you decided to detain the subject you would need reasonable suspicion. An order to show hands may be a minimal intrusion, but a detention is not.

Legal Standard

Asking a person to remove his hands from his pockets does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- . You requested that he remove his hands from his pockets; and
- . You did it for officer safety purposes.

Ordering a person to remove his hands from his pockets may not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention if:

- . You had a legitimate safety reason for ordering it; and ¹⁰⁴People v. Franklin, 192 Cal. App. 3d 935 (Cal. App. 5th Dist. 1987)

¹⁰⁵Id.

You articulate that ordering the person to remove his hands was a minimal intrusion of his freedom.¹⁰⁶

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Asking Person To Remove Hands From Pockets Not A Detention:

State v. Baldwin: In this case, the Florida District Court of Appeal differentiated between a command and a polite request for a suspect to remove their hands from their pockets, emphasizing officer safety. The court stated, "a request for a defendant to remove hands from pockets for reasonable purpose of officer's safety, does not elevate a consensual encounter to a detention." This case highlights that a courteous request for safety does not necessarily convert a consensual encounter into a detention.¹⁰⁷

Legal Difference Between Mere Request And Command:

The California Court of Appeal in this case clarified that simply asking a suspect to remove their hands from their pockets does not constitute a detention. The court noted, "merely asking a suspect to take his hands out of his pockets is not a detention." The case underscores the distinction between a mere request and a command in the context of police encounters.¹⁰⁸

Person Must Feel Free To Leave:

In re J.F.: The District of Columbia Court of Appeals discussed the fine line between a consensual encounter and a seizure, stating, "an officer's request that appellant take his hand out of his pocket may be considered merely a pre-seizure consensual encounter." This case illustrates how a consensual encounter can evolve into a seizure based on the perception of freedom to leave.¹⁰⁹

Request Is Not The Same As A Command:

In re Frank: Similar to People v. Frank V., this case by the California Court of Appeal also dealt with the distinction between a request and a command. The court observed, "A ¹⁰⁶ United States v. Enslin, 327 F.3d 788 (9th Cir. Cal. 2003).

¹⁰⁷ State v. Baldwin, 686 So. 2d 682 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1996).
¹⁰⁸ People v. Frank V., 233 Cal. App. 3d 1232 (1991).
¹⁰⁹ In re J.F., 19 A.3d 304 (D.C. Ct. App. 2011).

mere request that a citizen remove his hands from his pockets is not the same as a command to stop or stay." This decision further clarifies the difference between a request and a detention during police encounters.¹¹⁰

Direct Order To Remove Hands Likely A Seizure:

In re Rafeal E., the Appellate Court of Illinois found that a police command can transform a consensual encounter into a seizure. The court stated, "when a police officer approaches an individual and immediately tells him 'to remove his hands from his pockets,' a reasonable person would understand that statement as a command, not a request." This case demonstrates how a direct order from police can constitute a seizure.¹¹¹

Refusal To Remove Hands Is A Factor Justifying Frisk:

"The officers, after initiating the stop, twice ordered that [defendant] remove his hands from his pockets, which he refused to do. The report of an assault in progress, the matching description, and the additional factors that supported the stop provided the officers with reason to believe that [defendant] was armed and dangerous, and that the refusal to remove his hands was an effort to conceal a weapon."¹¹²

D.C. Court Upheld Request To Remove Hands:

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals held that a non-intimidating request by a police officer does not constitute a seizure. The court observed, "Officer's request that appellee remove his hands from his pockets, followed by two questions and appellee's voluntary answers, met the Supreme Court test for a pre-seizure, consensual encounter." This case underscores that certain police interactions can remain within the bounds of a consensual encounter.¹¹³

¹¹⁰ In re Frank, 233 Cal. App. 3d 1232 (1991).
¹¹¹ In re Rafeal E., 2014 IL App (1st) 133027 (Ill. App. Ct. 2014).
¹¹² United States v. Simmons, 560 F.3d 987 (D.C. Cir. 2009).
¹¹³ United States v. Barnes, 496 A.2d 1040 (D.C. Ct. App. 1985).

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Transporting to Police Station

There is no Fourth Amendment violation if you consensually transport a subject to the police station for a consensual interview or to a crime scene. The key is that the subject's consent must be freely and voluntarily given.

Legal Standard

You may voluntarily transport a person in a police vehicle. However, if the person is a suspect to a crime and you are transporting the person for an interview, remember:

- Make it clear to the person that he is not under arrest;
- Seek consent to patdown the suspect for weapons; if the patdown is denied, do not patdown and you probably should not transport.

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Police Overreach In Suspect Transportation And Interrogation:

In People v. Hunt, the Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Fourth Department, New York, held that the police conducted a de facto arrest without probable cause when they transported the defendant to the police station for interrogation on unrelated crimes after witnesses failed to identify him as the prowler. The court emphasized, "The conduct of the police in placing defendant in a police vehicle, transporting him to a police station and interrogating him for over two hours regarding crimes unrelated to the charge for which he had been detained in the first instance constituted a de facto arrest." This led to the reversal of the judgment, granting of the defendant's motion to suppress, and a new trial.¹¹⁴

¹¹⁴*People v. Hunt*, 547 N.Y.S.2d 968 (N.Y. App. Div. 1989)

Involuntary Transportation To Station Will Normally Be An Arrest:

In the case of Dunaway v. New York, the U.S. Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether police actions violated the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments. The case revolved around the petitioner, Dunaway, who was taken into custody without probable cause, transported to a police station, and detained for interrogation. The Court scrutinized whether this constituted an unreasonable seizure under the Fourth Amendment.

The Court's analysis centered on the nature of the seizure and the lack of probable cause. The key excerpt from the case is: "We first consider whether the Rochester police violated the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments when, without probable cause to arrest, they took petitioner into custody, transported him to the police station, and detained him there for interrogation. [...] There can be little doubt that petitioner was 'seized' in the Fourth Amendment sense when he was taken involuntarily to the police station. And respondent State concedes that the police lacked probable cause to arrest petitioner before his incriminating statement during interrogation."¹¹⁵

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

No Violation When A Person Agrees To Accompany Police:

Appellate courts have held that when a person agrees to accompany the police to a station for an interrogation or some other purpose, the Fourth Amendment is not violated.¹¹⁶

No Seizure After Agreeing To Accompany Police To The Station And Staying For Five Hours:

No seizure where defendant went with police to station and stayed there five hours before probable cause developed for his arrest.¹¹⁷

Detention Ended When Suspect Consented To Go To Police Station:

¹¹⁵*Dunaway v. New York*, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 126, 442 U.S. 200 (1979)
¹¹⁶*In re Gilbert R.*, 25 Cal. App. 4th 1121 (Cal. App. 2d Dist. 1994)
¹¹⁷*Craig v. Singletary* 27 F.3d 1030 (11th Cir.1997)

Law enforcement officer's Terry stop of automobile ended when defendant, who was riding in the automobile, agreed to go to police station, rather than when defendant was arrested several hours later.¹¹⁸

¹¹⁸United States v. Kimball, 25 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 1994)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Consent to Search

Absent good reason, you should routinely seek consent to search a person or his property even if you have reasonable suspicion or probable cause. Why? Because this will add an extra layer of protection to your case. For example, let's imagine you have probable cause to search a vehicle for drugs but still receive consent to search, the prosecution essentially needs to prove that consent was freely and voluntarily given.¹¹⁹ If that fails, the prosecutor can fall back on your probable cause.

It should be noted that New York officers are required to have at least founded suspicion before asking for consent to search.

Legal Standard

Asking a person for consent to search does not convert the encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The person's consent was freely and voluntarily given;
- He had apparent authority to give consent to search the area or item;
- You did not exceed the scope provided, expressed or implied. Scope is determined by objectively viewing the situation from the suspect's position.¹²⁰ Where would a reasonable person think you would search? It's not based only on where police think evidence would be found; and
- There exists founded suspicion.¹²¹
- Courts may look at four factors when evaluating whether or not the scope of search was exceeded: time, duration, area, and intensity.¹²² See case examples below.

¹¹⁹*Bumper v. North Carolina*, 391 U.S. 543 (1968)

¹²⁰*State v. Ruscetta*, 123 Nev. 299 (2007)

¹²¹See People v. Whalen, 956 N.Y.S.2d 598 (2012)

¹²²*State v. Ruscetta*, 123 Nev. 299 (2007)

- . Time: Was the search executed within the time frame contemplated by the suspect?
- . Duration: Was the search unreasonably lengthy?
- . Area: Did officers search areas where the item sought could be found?
- . Intensity: Did the methods used to search exceed the bounds of consent?

Things that help consent:¹²³

- . Telling person they do not have to allow the search
- . Telling person what you are searching for
- . Fewer officers
- . Plain clothes
- . No weapons displayed
- . No trickery such as hinting “no prosecution”
- . Relatively short contact before consent given
- . Friendly tone of voice, not threatening or commanding.
- . Giving Miranda warnings (especially if person is in custody)
- . All factors about the person giving consent such as: age, experience with the police, physical and mental condition, fluency in English.

Things that hurt consent:¹²⁴

- . Display of weapons or hand on weapon
- . Large number of police, especially uniformed
- . Deceit or trickery about either purpose or outcome
- . Officer’s threatening demeanor, tone of voice
- . A claim that police have authority to do the search anyway such as false claim that police have a warrant
- . Negatives about the person giving consent (young, lower intelligence, drunk, poor English).

¹²³Clark County Nevada DA Search and Seizure Manual for Lawyers (2015)

¹²⁴Id.

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Impact Of Coercion On Consent:

People v. Gonzalez, decided by the Court of Appeals of New York, revolved around whether the defendants' written consents to search their apartment were involuntary as a matter of law. The court held that the defendants' apparent consents were involuntary due to overbearing official conduct, and thus, the evidence seized should have been suppressed. The court emphasized that consent obtained through coercion, whether overt or subtle, cannot be considered voluntary. It was determined that the circumstances surrounding the consent, including the presence of multiple agents and the defendants being handcuffed, indicated a lack of free will. "Where there is coercion there cannot be consent."¹²⁵

The Officer Has The Burden To Prove Consent Was Voluntary:

In the Supreme Court case Bumper v. North Carolina, the Court addressed the issue of whether a search can be justified as lawful on the basis of consent when that "consent" has been given only after the official conducting the search has asserted that he possesses a warrant. The Court held that there can be no consent under such circumstances, stating, "When a prosecutor seeks to rely upon consent to justify the lawfulness of a search, he has the burden of proving that the consent was, in fact, freely and voluntarily given. This burden cannot be discharged by showing no more than acquiescence to a claim of lawful authority."¹²⁶

Consent Is Based On The Totality Of The Circumstances:

In Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, the Supreme Court dealt with the issue of consent in the context of law enforcement searches. The Court held that the voluntariness of consent to search must be determined from the totality of all the circumstances, and knowledge of the right to refuse consent is not a prerequisite to establishing a voluntary consent. The Court stated, "It is only by analyzing all the circumstances of an individual consent that it can be ascertained whether in fact it was voluntary or coerced." This decision highlights the Court's recognition of the practical challenges in requiring law enforcement to provide warnings about the right to refuse consent in the context of routine investigations.¹²⁷

¹²⁵*People v. Gonzalez*, 39 N.Y.2d 122 (1976)

¹²⁶*Bumper v. North Carolina*, 391 U.S. 543 (1968)

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

"I Don't Care," Response Implied Consent:

Suspect was stopped for speeding. He was suspected of drug possession and officer asked for consent to search. Suspect responded, "I don't care." Search revealed crack cocaine. Suspect's statement implied consent to search.¹²⁸

Note: this type of consent is not ideal and officers should try to get unambiguous consent to search.

Patdown Of Suspect Who Wanted To Get Out Of Vehicle Upheld:

Vehicle was stopped for an equipment violation. Driver wanted to get out and see proof that his taillight was broken. Officer said only on the condition that he be subject to a patdown. Suspect said, "that was fine" and stepped out. Patdown revealed drugs. Suspect voluntarily consented to patdown.¹²⁹

Search Of Van Two Days After Written Consent Received Was Upheld As Reasonable:

In-custody suspect gave written consent to search van for forensic evidence of a rape. Van was searched two days later by different agents. Under these particular circumstances, the time of the search was reasonable.¹³⁰

Note: Ideally, the suspect would have been told the search would be executed two days later. But since he was in custody and never revoked consent, the court upheld it.

Request For A "real Quick" Search Exceeded After 15 Minutes And Unscrewing Speaker Box:

¹²⁷ Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218 (1973)
¹²⁸ United States v. Polly, 630 F.3d 991 (10th Cir. Okla. 2011)
¹²⁹ State v. Cunningham, 26 N.E.3d 21 (Ind. 2015)
¹³⁰ U.S. v. White, 617 F.2d 1131 (5th Cir. 1989)

With defendant agreeing to the officer's request to "check (defendant's car) real quick and get you on your way," the scope of that consent was exceeded at some point before the search had continued for fifteen minutes without finding anything, and certainly when the officer later pulled a box from the trunk and removed the back panel to the box by unscrewing some screws.¹³¹

Directly "touching" Genitals Was Beyond The Implied Consent:

Officer got consent to search for drugs and "within seconds" reached down the defendant's crotch and felt the suspect's genital area searching for drugs. This area was not included in the consent to search. Note: Searching "near" genital area is often upheld.¹³²

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Third-Party Consent

You may seek consent to search a residence from co-occupants or others in control of property belonging to another person. However, the situation changes when there is a present non-consenting co-occupant. If one occupant tells you to "Come on in and bring your friends!" and another yells "Get the hell out, I'm watching Netflix!" Well, you must stay out.

What about areas under the exclusive control of the consentor? For example, the "cooperative" tenant says you can still search his bedroom? Or a shed that he has exclusive control over in the backyard? There is no case that deals directly with this issue, but if the area is truly under the exclusive control of the consenting party, and you can articulate that the non-consenting party has no reasonable expectation of privacy in that area, it would likely be reasonable to search just that area. But one issue remains; you still may not be able to access the area under the cooperative tenant's control without walking through common areas—common areas would still be off limits because the non-consenting party has authority over them.

¹³¹People v. Cantor, 149 Cal.App.4th 961 (2007)
¹³²U.S. v. Blake, 888 F.2d 795 (11th Cir. 1989)

The best practice is to wait until the non-consenting occupant has left the residence and then seek consent from the cooperative occupant. In other words, if the non-consenting occupant goes to work, a store, or is lawfully removed, the remaining occupant can consent to a search. Still; do not search areas under the exclusive control of the non-consenting party. This may include file cabinets, “man-caves,” purses, backpacks, and so forth.

Finally, if the consenting party has greater authority over the residence, then police may rely on that consent. For example, if a casual visitor or babysitter objected to police entry, it may be overruled by the homeowner. Remember, you may not search personal property under the exclusive control of the visitor or babysitter.

Legal Standard

Spouses and Co-Occupants:

Spouses or co-occupants may consent to search inside a home if:

- The person has apparent authority;
- Consent is only given for common areas, areas under his exclusive control, or areas or things the person has authorized access to; and
- A non-consenting spouse or co-occupant with the same or greater authority is not present.

Articulating Greater Authority:

An occupant with greater authority over the premises may consent to search over areas either under his exclusive control or common areas if:

- The co-occupant had greater authority over the area searched;
- You did not enter or walk through any area where the non-consenting occupant had equal or greater authority;
- You did not search any property under the exclusive control of the non-consenting occupant; and
- Your search did not exceed the scope provided by the consenting occupant.

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Third-Party Consent In Warrantless Searches:

In People v. Cuencas, the Court of Appeals of New York examined if the individual who opened the door to the apartment building had the authority to consent to the police entry into the defendant's apartment. The Court held that the individual who opened the door did not have apparent authority to consent to the entry. The Court emphasized that the suppression court erred when it relied on facts not known to police at the time they entered the building in determining that police had consent to enter the suspect's home without a warrant.¹³³

If Non-consenting Occupant Is Arrested Or Leaves, Remaining Occupant May Consent To Search Despite Prior Objection:

Police could conduct a warrantless search of defendant's apartment following defendant's arrest, based on consent to the search by a woman who also occupied the apartment, although defendant had objected to the search prior to his arrest and was absent at the time of the woman's consent because of his arrest.¹³⁴

If An Occupant Invites Police Inside, Police May Assume Other Occupants Wouldn't Object Unless They Speak Up:

In the case of Georgia v. Randolph, the Supreme Court of the United States addressed the issue of whether a warrantless search of a residence is lawful with the permission of one occupant when another occupant, who is present at the scene, expressly refuses to consent. The Court held that "a physically present co-occupant's stated refusal to permit entry prevails, rendering the warrantless search unreasonable and invalid as to him." This decision was made in the context of a domestic dispute where the wife, after returning to the marital home, informed the police of her husband's cocaine use and consented to a search of their home, while the husband objected. The Court emphasized the importance of the refusal of a present co-occupant in determining the legality of a ¹³³ People v. Cuencas, 40 N.Y.3d 480 (2023).

¹³⁴ Fernandez v. California, 571 U.S. 292 (2014).

warrantless search. This ruling underscores the balance between law enforcement interests and the constitutional rights of individuals in shared living situations.¹³⁵

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Consent Of Wife Valid After Non-consenting Husband Left Residence:

"The consent of one who possesses common authority over premises or effects" generally "is valid as against the absent, non-consenting person with whom that authority is shared."¹³⁶

¹³⁵ Georgia v. Randolph, 547 U.S. 103 (2006)

¹³⁶ United States v. Cordero-Rosario, 786 F.3d 64 (1st Cir. P.R. 2015)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Mistaken Authority to Consent

If you're a prudent officer you normally ask for consent to search, even if you have P.C.. Why? Because valid consent adds an extra layer of protection for your criminal case.

But sometimes you may think you're dealing with an occupant who has the authority to consent, but later find out you were wrong. For example, the consent was received from a guest, not homeowner. Here, courts will look to see if your mistake was reasonable.

For example, if an adult female answers the door and consents to a search and cops look around the apartment and it's fairly obvious that only a man lives there, then courts expect officers to stop searching and ask more questions about her connection to the apartment. In the end, she may be an overnight guest with no apparent authority over the defendant's property.

Legal Standard

If you mistakenly receive consent from a person who had "apparent authority," courts will employ a three-part analysis to determine if your mistake was reasonable:

- . Did you believe some untrue fact;
- . Was it objectively reasonable for you to believe that the fact was true under the circumstances at the time; and
- . If it was true, would the consent giver have had actual authority?

New York Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from New York, the 2nd Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Reasonable Mistake Of Authority In Exigent Search Situations:

In People v. Adams, decided by the New York Court of Appeals, the court addressed a scenario where police relied on the apparent authority of an individual under exigent circumstances. Following a shooting, police acted on the consent of a woman who claimed to be in danger and stated that the shooter, her boyfriend, might be in his apartment with weapons. The court upheld the search, noting, "Where searching officers rely in good faith on the apparent capability of an individual to consent to a search and the circumstances reasonably indicate that the individual does, in fact, have the authority to consent, evidence obtained as the result of such a search should not be suppressed."¹³⁷

Police May Rely On Apparent Authority:

In Illinois v. Rodriguez, the Supreme Court of the United States addressed the validity of a warrantless entry based on the consent of a third party who the police reasonably believe possesses authority over the premises, but who in fact does not. The Court held that a warrantless entry does not violate the Fourth Amendment if the officers have obtained the consent of a third party who they reasonably believe to possess common authority over the premises. Justice Scalia, delivering the opinion of the Court, stated, "The Fourth Amendment generally prohibits the warrantless entry of a person's home, whether to make an arrest or to search for specific objects. The prohibition does not apply, however, to situations in which voluntary consent has been obtained, either from the individual whose property is searched, or from a third party who possesses common authority over the premises." This case involved the arrest of Edward Rodriguez in his apartment by law enforcement officers, who gained entry with the consent and assistance of Gail Fischer, who had lived there with Rodriguez for several months but did not have actual authority over the premises at the time of the search."¹³⁸

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of New York and the 2nd Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in New York find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Police May Assume That The Adult Who Answered The Door Had Authority:

¹³⁷*People v. Adams*, 53 N.Y.2d 1 (N.Y. Ct. App. 1981)

¹³⁸*Ill. v. Rodriguez*, 497 U.S. 177 (1990)

Police were trying to locate a robbery suspect and knocked on his door. A visitor answered and consented to their request to enter. "Police may assume, without further inquiry, that [an adult] person who answers the door in response to their knock has the authority to let them enter."¹³⁹

¹³⁹People v. Ledesma, 39 Cal. 4th 641 (Cal. 2006)

Index

AIRPORT & OTHER ADMINISTRATIVE
CHECKPOINTS, 335
ARRESTS

“Contempt of Cop” Arrests, 140
Collective Knowledge Doctrine, 126
Drugs, attempt to swallow, 151
DUI blood tests, 155
DUI breath tests, 153
Lawful, 116
Line-Ups, 131
Meaning of “Committed in the Officer’s Presence?” 129
Protective sweeps, 134
Public protests, arrests at, 143
Search, “temporary” arrest, 149
Search, incident to, 145
Search, prior to formal arrest, 147
Vehicle search, incident to, 157
Warrant, entry with, 121
Warrantless entry, 124
When to “Un-arrest” a Suspect, 137

ARSON INVESTIGATIONS,
333

BORDER SEARCHES, 338
BUSINESSES & SCHOOLS

Customer business records, 273
Fire, health, and safety inspections,
277
Government workplace searches,
279
Heavily regulated businesses, 275
School searches, 280
SROs, security guards, and administrators, 285
Student drug testing, 284
Use of force against students, 288
Warrantless arrest inside business,
271

C.R.E.W., 21

CAUSE-OF-INJURY
SEARCHES, 325
CHECKPOINTS

Airport & other administrative, 335
DUI, 171

COLLECTIVE KNOWLEDGE DOCTRINE, 38, 126

CONFIDENTIAL
INFORMANTS, 348

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Asking for Identification, 61
Consensual Encounters, 47

Consent to search, 69
Investigative activities during
Consensual Encounter, 57
Knock and Talks, 53
Mistaken authority to consent,
76
Removing hands from pockets,
64
Third-party consent, 73
Transporting to Police Station,
67

DE BOUR FACTORS, 51
DECISION SEQUENCING, 20

DISCARDED DNA, 330
DUI

blood tests, 155
breath tests, 153
checkpoints, 171

FINGERNAIL SCRAPES,
332

FOURTH AMENDMENT

Fourth Amendment, 14
Reasonableness, 23

Search, 41

Seizure, 43

HOMES

Child’s room, parental consent to search, 233

Co-occupants, consent to search, 230

Curtilage, 222

Detaining a home in anticipation of a warrant, 266

Fresh pursuit, 240

Hot pursuit, 240

Hotel rooms, 213

Knock and talks, 215

Mistaken authority to consent,
235

Open fields, 220

Overview and standing, 210

Plain view seizure, 225

Protective sweeps, 237

RVs, 213

“Ruse” or lie, convincing suspect to exit, 264

Surround and call-out, 268

Tents, 213

Trash searches, 228

Warrantless arrest at doorway,
244

Warrantless entry based on “ruse” or lie, 261

Warrantless entry for an emergency, 248
Warrantless entry for officer safety, 250
Warrantless entry to investigate child abuse, 254
Warrantless entry to investigate homicide crime, 258
Warrantless entry to make arrest, 247
Warrantless entry to prevent destruction of evidence, 259
Warrantless entry to protect property, 256

HUNCHES, 30

INVESTIGATIVE ACTIVITIES, 57

INVESTIGATIVE DETENTIONS

Anonymous tip, 93
Detaining a suspect, 82
During stop, 88
Factors to consider, 79
Field identifications, 90
Flight, upon seeing officer, 91
Handcuffing, 97
Involuntary Transportation, 109
Length of detention, 86
Officer safety detentions, 84
Patdown, 101, 105
Plain Feel Doctrine, 107
Recording of Officer, 112
Use of force, 97
Victims, detaining, 99
Witnesses, detaining, 99

KNOCK AND ANNOUNCE, 353

KNOCK AND TALKS,

Consensual Encounters, 53
Homes, 217

LAW ENFORCEMENT LIABILITY

Attenuation, 376
Behavior that "shocks the conscience", 388
Deliberate indifference, 390
Duty to intervene, 383
Duty to protect, 381
Exclusionary rule, 368
Exclusionary rule, exceptions, 370
Fruit of the poisonous tree, 371
Good faith exception, 374
Inevitable or independent discovery, 378
Non-essential personnel, bringing into the home, 395
Qualified immunity, 396

Section 1983 civil rights violations, 393

Section 242 criminal charges, 394
Social media, sharing crime scene photos on, 392

Standing to object, 372

Supervisor liability, 385

Unequal enforcement of the law, 387

LEFT ALONE, RIGHT TO BE, 19

MEDICAL PROCEDURES, 327

MISCELLANEOUS SEARCHES & SEIZURES

Airport & other administrative checkpoints, 335

Arson investigations, 333

Border searches, 338

Cause-of-injury searches, 325

Discarded DNA, 330

Fingernail scrapes, 332

Medical procedures, 327

Probationer & parolee searches, 340

NEW YORK CONSTITUTION, 16

PATDOWNS

Based on anonymous tip, 105

For weapons, 101

PERSONAL PROPERTY,

Abandoned or Lost Property, 294

Searching containers, 291

Mail or Packages, 297

Single Purpose Container Doctrine, 292

PLAIN FEEL DOCTRINE, 107

PRIVATE SEARCHES, 26

PROBABLE CAUSE, 35

PROBATIONER & PAROLEE SEARCHES, 340

PROTECTIVE SWEEPS

Arrests, 134

Homes, 237

REASONABLE SUSPICION

Border search, 338

Community caretaking, 165

Confidential informants, 348

Consensual encounters, 47

Defined, 33

Detaining a suspect, 82

Drug testing, students, 284

Handcuffing, 97

Hands in pockets, removing, 64

Hot pursuit, 240

Hunches, 30

Identification, asking for, 59
K9, 184
Knock and talks, 53, 217
Length of detention, 86
Passengers, 184, 201, 205
Protective sweep, 134, 237
Recording of police, 112
School search, 280, 285
Stops, 167
Unrelated questioning, 203
Vehicles, 167, 169

REASONABLENESS, 23

RIGHT 'TO BE LEFT ALONE', 19

SEARCH WARRANTS

Anticipatory search warrant, 346
Confidential informants, 348
Detaining occupants inside and in immediate vicinity, 356
Frisking occupants, 359
Handcuffing occupants, 361
Knock and announce, 353
Overview, 343
Particularity requirement, 345
Receipt, return, and inventory, 366
Sealing affidavits, 351
Serving arrest warrant at residence, 363
Wrong address liability, 365

SEARCH

Arrest, incident to, 145
Border searches, 338
Cause of injury searches, 325
Child's room, parental consent to search, 233
Consent to search a vehicle, 179
Co-occupants, consent to search by, 230
Defined, 41
Government workplace searches, 279
Prior to formal arrest, 147
Private Searches, 26
Probationer & parolee searches, 340
School searches, 280
Searching vehicle incident to arrest, 190
Searching vehicle with probable cause, 193
Technology searches, 300-322
"Temporary" arrest, 149
Trash searches, 228
Vehicle search, incident to arrest, 190

SEIZURE (See also MISCELLANEOUS SEARCHES & SEIZURES)

Defined, 43

TECHNOLOGY SEARCHES

Aerial surveillance, 311
Automatic license plate readers, 319
Binoculars, 303
Cell phones, laptops and tablets, 308
Cell phone location records, 309
Drones, 313
Flashlights, 301
GPS devices, 321
Night vision goggles, 305
Obtaining passwords, 322

Pole cameras, 316
Sensory enhancements, 300
Thermal imaging, 306

VEHICLES

Checkpoints, DUI, 171
Checkpoints, information gathering, 174
Checkpoints, legal considerations, 176
Community caretaking, 165
Consent to search a vehicle, 179
Constructive possession, 205
Dangerous items left in vehicle, 196
Frisking people who ride in police vehicle, 182
General rule, 161
Inventories, 197
K9 sniff around vehicle, 186
Ordering passengers to stay in, or exit vehicle, 177
Passengers, identifying, 201
Reasonable suspicion, 167
Scope of stop similar to an investigative detention, 163
Searching vehicle and occupants for weapons, 184
Searching vehicle incident to arrest, 190
Searching vehicle with probable cause, 193
Temporary registration, verification of, 169
Unrelated questioning, 203

WRONG ADDRESS LIABILITY, 365

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Anthony Bandiero, JD, ALM

Anthony is an attorney and retired law enforcement officer with experience as both a municipal police officer and sergeant with a state police agency. Anthony has studied constitutional law for over twenty years and has trained countless police officers around the nation in search and seizure.

View his bio at BlueToGold.com/about

NEW YORK
Search & Seizure
Survival Guide

Your job as an officer is almost completely controlled by the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. Therefore, you need a reference that can break down these important constitutional doctrines into easy-to-apply checklists. That's what this book does. If you need guidance in the field, pick up this book. When you get back to the station and need help articulating the legal standards for your report, pick up this book.

There are other legal references out there and I highly recommend you read them. But this book has one serious competitive advantage: it was written by a retired police officer-turned-attorney who has been in your shoes, and knows what you need to know.

Blue to Gold

Visit: Bluetogold.com

Training | Legal Updates | Free Webinars

