Sedona's spectacular trails

Nestled within the Coconino National Forest, Sedona is home to 200 trails that span more than 400 miles. Access to these unique public lands is a key feature of the Sedona experience. Everyone who enjoys them has a responsibility to preserve and protect them for generations to come.

Trail etiquette for hikers and bikers

To help manage and protect these precious public lands, we kindly ask visitors to avoid off-trail experiences or trails that are not recognized by the U.S. Forest Service. Using so-called “social trails,” while tempting, can lead to significant environmental harm and are not maintained or managed for your safety.

 TIP: If you plan to park at a trailhead, purchase in advance a daily, weekly or annual Red Rock Pass at the Uptown or Red Rock Ranger District Visitor Centers. Daily passes available at trailhead kiosks.

Signature hikes

Signature hikes include some of our most stunning landscapes but can be busy during peak times of year. Access these signature hikes without driving and parking your car by using the Sedona Shuttle:

- Cathedral Rock Trail
- Bell Rock Trail
- Devil's Bridge Trail
- Soldiers Pass Trail

 TIP: Arrive early to beat the crowds during peak seasons (spring and fall).

Solitude hikes

Solitude hikes get you close to the red rocks on less-traveled trails, with trailheads that aren't as in high demand as others:

- Courthouse Butte loop
- Chimney Rock loop
- Mescal Trail
- Bear Mountain Trail

Learn more about Sedona's trails at ScenicSedona.com/hike

 TIP: If you're visiting during the summer, hit the trails early to avoid the rising daytime temperatures.

World-class mountain biking experiences

Sedona is home to hundreds of miles of world-class singletrack. Trail experiences range from fun and flowy to technical climbing and descent, dry washes and sandstone features. All the trails connect so you can pop out almost wherever and whenever you want, and regardless of where you stay, you'll have trail access practically right outside door.

 TIP: Test your mountain bike abilities at the City of Sedona Bike Skills Park before you hit the trails!

Sedona will change you

The reds, greens and blues in the Sedona landscape have inspired optimism and self-reflection for generations. You'll immediately know that visiting Sedona just feels good, whether you define it as relaxed or rejuvenated, motivated or massaged.

Wellness

If wellness is your goal, Sedona offers many ways to pursue it as there are ways to define it. You might try a guided outdoor yoga session on Coconino Forest land, hiking with a philosophy professor, forest bathing, or a dip in the cool waters of Oak Creek. Even a quiet hike alone at sunrise or sunset among the red rocks and serene beauty of Sedona can be life transforming.

TIP: Many resorts have on-site spa facilities and offer treatments from expert practitioners. Day spas are conveniently located all around town.

Spirituality

There are several metaphysical and crystal shops, some of which include shelves of books ranging in topics from Ayurveda medicine to mindfulness and self-healing, traditional contemplative practices to other-worldly esoterica. Sedona is also home to experienced practitioners offering guided metaphysical and spiritual services and individual or group wellness sessions.

Whatever the depth and breadth of wellness or spiritual discovery you seek, Sedona offers countless ways to explore and experience it. Allow yourself to discover a new perspective of what it means and how it feels to strengthen the connection with yourself.

The energy in Sedona is palpable, whether that be from the red rocks or the gently flowing water from Oak Creek that runs through the heart of town. That connection to nature—the awe and reverence you feel from being surrounded by such beauty—is something you must experience yourself.

WHAT IS A SEDONA VORTEX?

While there is no definitive explanation of a vortex, it is generally agreed that certain sites in and around Sedona make you feel something extra. When visiting a vortex site, you may feel a heightened sense of awareness, profound emotions, a surge of physical energy or deep sense of peace. The experience is unique to everyone. Sedona invites you to explore it for yourself. The four most well-known vortex locations are:

- Airport Mesa
- Boynton Canyon
- Bell Rock
- Cathedral Rock

Sedona stargazing

Stargazing is exploring the ultimate art gallery. Humans have been charting the stars since at least Ancient Egyptian times, and it's probably safe to say we've been stargazing much longer. On a clear and crisp night, who can ignore a sky full of twinkling stars and shining planets, or wonder at the brightness of a full moon as it rises above the horizon? As Ralph Waldo Emerson famously said, "The sky is the ultimate art gallery just above us." This is especially true in Sedona, Arizona.

No light pollution: it's really dark here!

Since 2014, Sedona has been designated an International Dark Sky Community. Driving through town at night, you might notice that businesses are not brightly lit on the outside and the streetlights point straight down. Measures like these protect Sedona from light pollution and create excellent conditions for stargazing.

Altitude, wide-open spaces and red rocks

At 4,360 ft elevation, the stars above Sedona shine with extraordinary clarity and the Milky Way often dominates the sky. Add to that Sedona's wide-open desert spaces framed by its famous red rocks in the darkness, and conditions for stargazing become nearly ideal.

Comfortable night temperatures

Nighttime temperatures in Sedona, even in summer, drop considerably lower than daytime temperatures, allowing for comfortable stargazing well into the night.

Guided stargazing experiences

A handful of local businesses offer guided stargazing tours. Check tour listings on ScenicSedona.com to find specific offerings. In addition, select Sedona hotels provide stargazing opportunities and telescopes on their properties.

Self-guided stargazing opportunities

Do you prefer to explore the stars solo? Sedona has many convenient places to look skyward. Consider these trailheads for stargazing: Little Horse trailhead, Bell Rock trailhead, or Dry Creek trailhead.

TIPS:

- Plan around the moon phase: new moon dates yield the darkest skies
- Download a digital map of the trail—if you plan to hike to a stargazing location
- Download a stargazing app to easily identify celestial objects
- Bring a jacket—desert nights can cool off quickly
- Respect private property—always stay on trail or designated public lands
- Sound travels far in the dry desert climate—speak quietly and keep music volume low
- Stay alert for wildlife that may be nearby and maintain a safe distance

What time of night is best?

Make plans for stargazing with the hour of sunset in mind. Full darkness occurs about 1.5 hours later.

Whether you join a guided tour, hike to a secluded location, or just gaze up at the majestic Milky Way from your hotel balcony, Sedona offers stargazing that's educational, enchanting—and unforgettable.

Verde Valley Wine Trail

Move over, Napa. Step aside, Sonoma. Welcome to Arizona's Verde Valley, a desert-meets-river oasis where volcanic soil, high-elevation sun, and a touch of red rock magic conspire to produce some of the Southwest's most surprising wines.

When did winemaking start in Sedona and the Verde Valley?

When the Spanish first arrived in the late 1500s, they named the area Via de Uva, or Valley of the Grape, because a native grape variety grew here in abundance. Sadly, the native grape is inedible. Fast-forward 300 years when Henry Schuerman, a German immigrant, planted the first vineyard in the Sedona area in the late 1880s and supplied wine to the miners in Jerome, AZ.

Although the Verde Valley was designated as Arizona's third American Viticulture Area (AVA) in 2021, the modern wine industry in the Verde Valley began in 1997 when Jon Marcus started Echo Canyon Vineyard and Winery. More wineries soon followed—Page Springs Cellars, Javelina Leap, Oak Creek, and Arizona Stronghold Vineyards—and winemaking in the Verde Valley has been steadily growing ever since.

What makes the Verde Valley good for winemaking?

Many factors make the Verde Valley favorable for growing grapes. Volcanic soil (like Italy, Spain, parts of California), large limestone deposits (like Bordeaux and Rhone), elevation around 3,500ft, and the bright Arizona sun all contribute to growth.

Possibly the most significant factor supporting vineyards in the Verde Valley is the region's diurnal shift. Diurnal shift is the term used to describe the difference between the high temperature during the day and cold temperature at night. In the Verde Valley, the difference in temperatures can be 30°F or more, which is similar to the temperature shifts found in Mendoza, Argentina. High temps during the day encourage sugar production in grapes and low temps at night preserve acidity, producing well-balanced wines.

What Verde Valley wines should I try?

Arizona wineries offer a unique mix of white, red, rosé, dessert, and sparkling wines that are similar to old-world style wines. White wine grapes include, but are not limited to Chardonnay, Viognier, and Picpoul Blanc. Red wine grapes include Syrah, Sangiovese, Merlot and more.

TIP: Leave the car behind and let local experts guide your Sedona wine adventure. Wine tour options are numerous, including traditional driver-provided tours as well as Water to Wine (which includes kayaking the Verde River) and Trails to Vines (which includes horseback riding). Please drink responsibly.

JUST MINUTES AWAY...

The Verde Valley Wine Trail includes at least 26 local vineyards, wineries and tasting rooms throughout the region—here are a few just minutes from Uptown Sedona:

- Winery 1912 (2 minutes)
- Oak Creek Vineyards & Winery (21 minutes)
- Javelina Leap Vineyard & Winery (21 minutes)
- Page Springs Cellars (22 minutes)
- DA Ranch (23 minutes)

Plan your trip

Many first-time visitors plan a trip to Sedona with an idea of how it looks and feels, what activities are available and how their trip will go. They picture it like the desert cities in southern Arizona but with prettier rocks. Soon after arriving, they suddenly realize that Sedona is more, far more than they imagined. There is just so much to see, do and be in Sedona, it feels like anything – and everything – is possible.

 TIP: When you arrive, stop by the Uptown Visitor Center for on-the-ground knowledge for all things Sedona.

To help prepare you for making the most of your Sedona experience, here's a quick list of activities and adventures you may look forward to during your visit:

- OUTDOOR ADVENTURE: Sedona is surrounded by 1.8 million acres of national forest. From air tours to hiking, there are myriad ways to experience the breathtaking landscapes of Red Rock Country with an expert guide.
- WELLNESS: Many resorts and day spas offer relaxing treatments to fully enhance your stay.
- SPIRITUALITY: Whether you're aligning chakras or meditating to the sounds of nature, Sedona's energies will inspire you to new heights.
- CULTURE: Many ancient heritage sites and monuments built by the Sinagua and other Native American tribes are spread throughout the red rock landscape.
- SHOPPING: Whether you're looking for fun keepsakes to give to friends or one-of-a-kind works of art, Sedona has over 150 retail shops and galleries.

- DARK SKIES AND STARGAZING: Sedona became an International Dark Sky Community in 2014. It was the 8th location in the world to achieve this designation.
- DINING & DRINKS: Over 100 dining and drink options including local Sedona breweries and distilleries.
- VERDE VALLEY WINE TRAIL: The Verde Valley became an American Viticultural Area (AVA) in 2021 and boasts nearly 30 vineyards, cellars and tasting rooms.
