The importance of installing rooflights properly

When installed correctly, a rooflight should perform as expected for decades. Letting in natural light and warmth and helping with ventilation, a rooflight is a special addition to any room.

Whether you are purchasing the authentic design of a Conservation rooflight or the sleek minimalism of the Neo®, using the approved and trusted skills of the NOVA team means you have the confidence that your investment will be a beautiful, high performing addition to your home.

However, poor or incorrect installation of rooflights can lead to hidden and even disastrous consequences, which are always suffered by you, the homeowner.

What happens when a rooflight is not installed correctly?

Compromised thermal performance

Rooflights require appropriate insulation to prevent heat loss and 'cold bridging'. Incorrectly installed insulation reduces the thermal performance of your rooflight by up to 30%, encourages condensation and promotes mould growth.

The use of a thermal collar prevents cold bridging, however this is often missed by inexperienced installers.

Weatherproof

We all know it likes to rain in the UK and the one thing you really do not want is water to leak through your rooflight. Incorrectly installed flashing around the rooflight can allow water to seep in.

It is also crucial to make sure the rooflight is level, straight and untwisted. Failure to check this can lead to the weather seals insufficiently sealing which will affect air-tightness and may also cause 'binding' during opening/closing of the unit.

Installation

During the installation process, accurate measurements are vital. Even the slightest error when setting out and cutting can lead to uneven frame margins and incorrect alignment.

Internal finishes

You will mostly look at your rooflight from the inside and so it is vitally important that the finish is to the highest standard.

One of the features of a rooflight from The Rooflight Co is the beautiful, frameless internal appearance. This is achieved with the skilled fitting of a timber or plaster reveal around the head, cill and jambs. Without this, you will be able to see the mechanisms of the rooflight and it will lead to mould growth.

Why choose the NOVA team for your rooflight installation?

Rooflights from The Rooflight Co are not quite like other rooflights. Made from premium materials, with each unit hand-assembled and individually quality checked at their workshop in the Cotswolds, the rooflights are substantial products with bespoke fittings.

Installation is a highly skilled process and the Nova team are proud to be the first contractor to achieve 'Approved Installer' status from The Rooflight Co.

Quotation process

Following your enquiry, we will request information from you. The more information, the better. There's no such thing as too much detail!

- If available, plans/pictures showing where the roof lights are to be installed
- Photographs/videos of the property – showing the roof structure and tile detail. Internally, the position of where the Rooflight will be installed
- Access to the roof, highlighting any potential issues
- Timeframe of when you anticipate the work to be carried out

We will then provide a desktop quotation. If a site survey is required, we will arrange a convenient date with you. On acceptance of our quotation, we will book your installation and you can leave the rest up to us.

Here for you after the project has finished

We don't believe in doing a job and disappearing. We value long-term relationships with our customers and our team are on hand after the project to answer questions or queries you may have.
