MOUNTAINSIDE ROCK CRAWLING

Mountainside Rock Crawling

The mountains form a place where your sense of adventure can truly shine, exploring spots few ever get to see. Mountains are big bits of rock that are formed by tectonic forces, erosion, or volcanism. They are some of the oldest terrain on earth, with some mountain ranges being over 3 billion years old! It takes a very long time for large mountain ranges to form. In fact, mountains grow a few millimeters each year. Mountains exist on every continent in the world, and they're visited every year by explorers. Some people go to climb the mountains, while others visit for scenic views, and of course, off-roading from rocky ridges to hidden valleys, the adventure is just beginning.

Five Fun Facts About Mountains:

- Mountains Can Grow: Some mountains are still growing today! The Himalayan mountains, where Mount Everest is, are getting taller every year because the Earth's plates are pushing together! They can grow a few millimeters each year.
- Mountains Have Different Climates: As you climb up a mountain, the temperature gets colder. At the top of really tall mountains, like in the Andes or the Rockies, it can be snowing even when it's warm at the bottom!
- Mountains Are Home to Cool Animals: Some animals, like mountain goats, have special hooves that help them climb steep cliffs! These animals can walk on rocks and jump from ledge to ledge like it's no big deal.
- Some Mountains Are Volcanoes: Did you know that some mountains are actually volcanoes? Mounts like Mount Fuji in Japan and Mount St. Helens in the U.S. were made when lava erupted from deep inside the Earth!
- You Can Find Ancient Rocks in Mountains: Mountains are like giant history books! The rocks that make up mountains can be billions of years old, holding secrets about Earth's past. From ancient canyons to dinosaurs that once roamed the land!

Exploring the Dunes

Imagine an arid, open world of rolling sand dunes, where the only sound is the whisper of wind or the crunch of tires. Desert dunes are some of the most beautiful and unique landscapes on Earth. They are formed by wind-blown sand, and they can be found in many different shapes and sizes. Some dunes are as small as a hill, while others are as large as a mountain. The tallest sand dune in the world is in Argentina, and it stands over 4,000 feet (1,200m) tall! Small dunes are also found in the desert, and you can go exploring on the coast of your favorite beach. Look for them on your next vacation! In the sand dunes, you can go exploring, and other vehicles can. It's the perfect place to explore the wild, open desert in search and discover new, hidden corners of this beautiful terrain.

Five Fun Facts About Deserts:

- Deserts Can Be Hot AND Cold: While we usually think of deserts as super hot places, some deserts can be freezing cold at night! The temperature can drop so low that it feels like winter, even if it's really hot during the day.
- Camel Can Store Water: Some camels, like the dromedary, can store up to 200 gallons of water inside their thick, spiky bodies. This helps them survive even when it doesn't rain for months!
- Desert Animals Are Masters of Hiding: Animals like the fennec fox have big ears to help them hear and keep cool in the hot desert. And many desert animals, like lizards and snakes, are experts at blending in with the sand to hide from predators.
- Desert Plants Have Sneaky Survival Tricks: Some desert plants have tiny leaves to keep as much water as possible. Others have deep roots that reach way down to find hidden water deep in the ground.
- Some Deserts Are Really Old: The Sahara Desert, one of the biggest deserts in the world, has been around for millions of years. Long ago, it was actually a lush, green place full of lakes and forests!
