As summer begins to unfold and the days stretch a little longer, I always find myself thinking about renewal – not just in our gardens and homes, but in our hearts as well. There's something comforting about this season. Fresh projects on the sewing table, the hum of creativity returning, Saturday afternoon baseball games on the radio, and the simple joy of gathering with people we love all remind us that every season offers a chance to begin again.

With Father's Day approaching, I've been reflecting on one of my favorite memories of my dad. When I was a little girl, I had lots of freckles – and unfortunately, children could be pretty unkind about them. I remember being teased terribly and feeling so self-conscious. Freckle-faced strawberry being the most prevalent. But my father changed all of that with just a few simple words. He told me I was actually very lucky because freckles were actually angel kisses. He made me feel so special, so loved, and so confident that something amazing happened: the teasing stopped bothering me completely. And because I no longer reacted, eventually the teasing itself stopped too.

It's funny how the people who love us most can completely reshape the way we see ourselves. That gift of confidence and kindness stayed with me my whole life, and I still think of him every time summer sunshine brings those freckles out a little more.

This year, we're also beginning to see celebrations for America's 250th birthday appearing across the country. It's a meaningful reminder of the traditions, resilience, and community spirit that connect generations. Quilting has always been woven into America's story – passed from hand to hand, family to family, preserving memories while creating something beautiful and lasting. In many ways, quilts are like those little "angel kisses" from the past – reminders that love, encouragement, and creativity continue long after the moment itself has passed.

Here at Emma's Quilt Cupboard, I'm continually grateful for the community we've built together. Your creativity, friendships, and shared love of quilting make this shop feel like home. Whether you're beginning a brand-new project, finishing a treasured quilt, or simply stopping in for inspiration and conversation, I hope this season brings you joy, renewal, and plenty of special memories of your own.

Happy quilting,

Cyndi

Treasure Island

Coastal Escape

FABRIC KIT

$179.99

This kit captures everything we love about a day by the water—gentle waves, crisp coastal blues, and charming sailboats drifting across the horizon. The Treasure Island pattern brings it all together in a design that feels both fresh and timeless, making it a joy to stitch whether you're dreaming of the beach or decorating your favorite getaway space. Inside your kit, you'll find the Coastal Escape fabrics needed for the quilt top and binding, thoughtfully curated to highlight the movement and color of the collection. The pattern's layout lets those beautiful prints shine while creating a finished quilt that looks far more intricate than it is, perfect for confident beginners and seasoned quilters alike.

Whether you're stitching this as a gift, a summer project, or a little escape of your own, this kit is your ticket to smooth sailing and creative bliss.

Benartex
