...&repeat

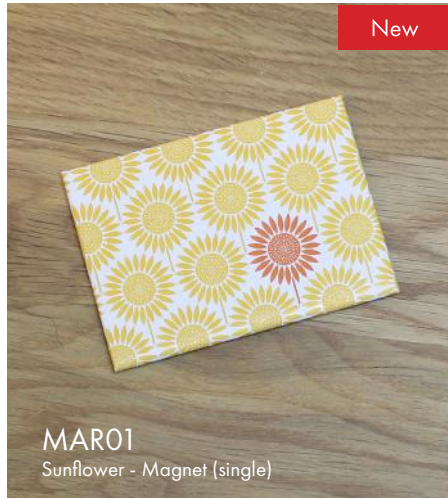

We are delighted to introduce a new licensed range from ...&repeat. The products are fun and quirky and say a lot about Britain and classic British design. It all started when graphic designer Davey Podmore created a pattern from a repeated image of a London landmark. The pattern worked so well he started to look at other landmarks and items of popular British culture. They have been re-imagined in a contemporary, stylised way that emphasises the relevance of heritage in our modern British identity.

Atoms to Astronauts was created during lockdown by Damian Hardacre, a chemistry teacher who simply loved science from a young age. He initially designed a chemistry notebook cover for himself and the business just grew from there. Featuring original writings and diagrams, these scientific designs have been created to inspire a new generation of scientists.

Black & Beech

Black & Beech was created in 2016 by fashion design lecturer and mum of two, Stacey. This design-led brand's raison d'être is "to get people talking about issues that matter."

A common thread throughout all of her products is intersectional feminism, which is reflected in these bone china mugs.

bluebellgray

Bluebellgray is a Scottish design studio based in Glasgow. Fi and her team invite you to experience "a life more colour full" with fresh, uplifting prints to add joy to your home. Founded in 2009, the first six cushions Fi originally created on her kitchen table have since grown into a full range of textiles and other homeware, all in her signature watercolour style.

dandelion stationery

Jo Wilson started Dandelion Stationery in 2014 after leaving a corporate environment for a better work/life balance. She now works more hours than she ever did, but she absolutely loves it!

Together with her team (including two German Pointers called Ted & Toby), their quirky designs are dreamt up in their little studio in Derbyshire.

Most recently, they are finalists in two categories at The Henries 2024, having previously won Best Contemporary Words & Sentiments in 2022.

Madeleine Floyd

Madeleine studied Fine Art & Illustration at Camberwell College of Art, and has achieved great success in both fields. She works from her studio in London and is fast becoming one of Britain's best-loved artists.

Her illustrations are informed by a strong draughtsmanship that captures the essence and emotion of the subjects she chooses, combining a timeless sensitivity with a gentle humour.

We have a selection of exciting new designs from Madeleine, many of which compliment gorgeous textiles in collaboration with Samuel Lamont and Sons: www.samuellamont.com

orla kiely

This inimitable Orla Kiely brand was established in 1995 by Orla and her husband Dermott after the birth of their first son. With her passion for colour and mid-century design, her prints soon stood out.

Sarah Leask

— STUDIO —

Sarah Leask Studio is a new licensed range that we are delighted to introduce for 2025. Having graduated from Gray's School of Art, Sarah began running her home studio in Aberdeen in 2017. Colour and pattern are hugely important in her work and her wildflowers collection is no exception. Sarah researched wildflowers from Shetland, her original home, and began painting floral watercolours and then building this gorgeous pattern.
