Winchelsea pool officially re-opens 27 February 2025

Free admission from day gates open until end of family fun day on Sunday 2 March

Surf Coast Shire

Winchelsea community members are preparing to make a splash in their $8.9 million new pool.

A formal opening ceremony for the pool will be on Thursday 27 February and Surf Coast Shire Council is working hard to open gates to the community several days earlier, pending progress of final commissioning processes.

Council will confirm the open-to-the-community date via surfcoast.vic.gov.au/WinchelseaPool and social and other media during the next fortnight.

Admission will be free from the day gates open until close of a free gala family fun day on Sunday 2 March.

The redeveloped Barwon Terrace site features new 25m and leisure pools with heated water, pavilion, a splash park, shelters, landscaping, barbecue, water fountain and plant room.

Mayor Mike Bodsworth encouraged community members to enjoy making a splash and taking a first look at the new facilities.

"Council is proud to be delivering this wonderful, state-of-the-art community asset which has been fully funded through Council's asset renewal program," Cr Bodsworth said.

"We look forward to having people from Winchelsea community coming together to celebrate during the free opening days and at the free family day, and seeing the pool deliver health and wellbeing benefits and fun times for people of all ages and abilities for decades to come.

"The previous pool opened to the public in February 1963 and served the community for 60 years. Now we look forward to a new era, with the new facilities being loved and valued just as much."

The free family fun day will run from 10am to 5pm on 2 March, featuring entertainment, sausage sizzle, fun activities, giveaways and games.

The new pool season will run until 30 March, with gates open 3pm to 7pm Monday to Friday and 10am to 5pm on weekends.

The former pool was decommissioned in March 2023 having reached the end of its serviceable life.

Input from almost 300 people helped shape designs for the new pool, including addition of the splash park.

Winchelsea Probus Club visits Barwon Park Mansion

Story Linda Carter Photos Kelvin Russell

Winchelsea Probus Club's first meeting for the year was held at Barwon Park

Many thanks to Claudette for inviting us.

Right on cue at 10 o'clock just as the meeting was about to start we had a downpour of rain which was deafening on the roof so we paused for a cuppa waiting for it to stop.

After the meeting we were able to wander around the elegant and fascinating mansion. Even after several visits there is always something new to discover, If any one hasn't been I strongly recommend a visit to this wonderful jewel in our lovely town, and the history of the Austin's well worth exploring.

Following that most of us enjoyed lunch at the Bottom Pub. A great way to start the year

Barwon Park is an imposing bluestone mansion set in a sweeping rural landscape

When pastoralist Thomas Austin and his wife Elizabeth entertained the Duke of Edinburgh, who was the second in line to the British throne, it became obvious that grander accommodations were required. They decided to build a new house. H.R.H. Prince Alfred visited Victoria two more times, but the house, unfortunately, remained unfinished.

Built between 1869 – 1871, the Austin's owned one of the largest homesteads in the Western District. The lavish 42 room mansion was built of basalt and decorated with a unique cast iron verandah and balcony.

Thomas Austin died just eight months after the house was completed, but Elizabeth lived at Barwon Park for many years and became a noted philanthropist, founding the Austin Hospital and Austin Homes, Geelong. The house then passed into the hands of the Batson family who later bequeathed it to the National Trust.

Barwon Park continues to impress visitors with its magnificent entrance hall and pink and white interiors. On open days. tours run hourly: 11am, 12pm, 1pm, 2pm and 3pm (last tour), led by National Trust Guides. Entry to the Mansion is by guided tour only. The extensive grounds also offer plenty of space to enjoy a picnic with family and friends.

Opening Times

September to May Wednesday & Sunday 11:00am-4:00pm. June, July & August Last Sunday of Month 11:00am-4:00pm.

Entry to the Mansion is by guided tour only. Tours run on the hour: 11am, 12pm, 1pm, 2pm and 3pm

Admission

Adult: $15, Concession: $10, Child: $5, Family (2A + 2C): $30 National Trust Members receive FREE general entry. Tickets can be purchased on arrival.

Important step to protect cats and wildlife

The Victorian Government is improving the health and wellbeing of domestic cats and protecting our unique native wildlife with the launch of the state's first cat management strategy.

The strategy addresses the challenges of unowned and semi-owned cats, which make up most of the cat intake at shelters.

It will look at ways to promote full and responsible ownership of these cats and target programs to capture, desex and rehome.

Feral cat management is another key

The strategy will improve information sharing between councils with successful cat management strategies and deliver more flexible registration options.

Importantly, the strategy recognises that cat management is a shared responsibility between councils, the State Government, community members and animal welfare organisations.

Volunteering at Blaze Aid

Yvonne and Geoff Orchard

We enjoyed reading Tony Phelps article re his stint helping at Blaze Aid last week. It brought back many memories of our experience helping at Blaze Aid in Bruthen, on Eastern Vic. in March 2020.

Geoff was welcomed with open arms, to use his professional skills, and service the 40 odd chainsaws, etc. and teach the volunteers how to use them. Geoff also helped with the fencing.

I was wondering what I could do, and found myself in the kitchen helping prepare and serve meals with an ex chef from the Grand Hotel at Queenscliff. I grew up in Queenscliff so we had that in common.

One day I made and cooked pancakes for all, when the chef was stumped on what to serve for sweets, I cooked over 80!

There were other grey nomads and backpackers there too, giving the latter somewhere to go as the pandemic reared its ugly head. We found the experience very humbling as we heard stories of devastation and heartache, alongside those of triumph and restoration.

We would thoroughly recommend the experience to anyone who could spare the time. We were eventually sent packing as COVID guidelines wouldn't allow over 70s.

Response to Dan Tehan's press release last week

Mary Cotter

The press release by the Member for Wannon, Dan Tehan, published in The Winchelsea Star on the 4th Feb, raises concerns about road safety and infrastructure funding under the Albanese government. While it's true that road fatalities have increased, attributing this solely to the current federal government's actions is very much clutching at straws, and demands a more nuanced examination.

Mr Tehan claims that fixing roads is his "number one priority", and in his maiden speech to Parliament in 2010 he also said that he was elected to fix the roads. But let's be clear: he has represented Wannon for 15 years, and the Coalition was in government for nearly a decade of that time - if roads were truly his top concern, why are they still in such poor condition?

Instead of taking responsibility for this failure, he tries to shift blame to the current federal government despite the condition of local and regional roads being primarily the responsibility of state and local governments. The Federal Government provides significant funding support, but it is not responsible for project selection, much less day-to-day maintenance. With the roads in Wannon deteriorating further, the Opposition should be questioning the Victorian State Government, not using road safety as a political football.

The call to cancel the Suburban Rail Loop to fund rural roads is a false choice. Public transport investment is essential for reducing congestion, lowering emissions, and improving urban mobility. It does not come at the expense of road safety funding.

If Mr Tehan couldn't fix roads during almost ten years with a Coalition government in power, why should voters believe he'll do it now?

Name of Winchelsea Shire Hall

Jenny Mathison

As an involved resident of Winchelsea for 54 years, can anyone tell me when the name of the Winchelsea Shire Hall was changed, or was it?

It still has the name on the outside, Winchelsea Shire Hall, and to those who live here, it really has history enough to still honour it with that name.

I was confused this week when I saw an event to be held at Old Winchelsea Shire Hall. No... it is just the Winchelsea Shire Hall. Renovated and thriving with activities.

Another event advertised this week, referred to an event to be held at Winchelsea Community Hall. While the address which was added did tell me it was 28 Hesse Street Winchelsea (and I might add, looks like a great Mens event, called Bogged) I still don't understand why people have changed it from the name on the building, Winchelsea Shire Hall. Please, let's be consistent.

The devasting cost of a dry summer - dead fish floating on the billabong on Deans Marsh Road

Judy Cameron

There is a lovely billabong, with a central island, off the Barwon River beside the Winchelsea-Deans Marsh Road. I have seen swans raise cygnets there.

I took this photo of pelicans in early January. The water level had already dropped as sheep can be seen on the island as there was a shallow area they could wade across to get much-needed grass.

Last week I took these photos showing the water level had dropped so low the surface of what was left was littered with dead fish.

RACV reminds drivers of road safety around schools

RACV

The Victorian school year resumes this week, with more than a million students expected to walk through school gates in 2025. The return to the classroom serves as an important reminder for all road users, not just parents and carers, to be alert for children when driving and understand the road rules around school zones.

According to the Transport Accident Commission (TAC), around seven children aged 0 to 15 die each year on Victorian roads.

RACV General Manager Mobility Julia Hunter encourages everyone to do their part to make school zones safe. "School zones are crucial areas where road safety must always be top of mind. Children are at risk around roads because they are less visible, and have a reduced ability to judge time, speed and distance," said Ms Hunter.

"RACV is encouraging parents and carers to plan ahead, and where possible, consider parking further away from the school, as congestion increases the likelihood of collisions. Consider walking or riding with your children to school while demonstrating safe behaviours. This includes using children's crossings or zebra crossings, meeting children on the same side of the road, and being bicycle safe.

"Children aged 12 and under, as well as accompanying adults, are allowed to ride on the footpath in Victoria. All children and adults riding on the footpath must still wear a helmet. Parents may think that providing their child with an e-scooter may help with the school commute and congestion, however these are in fact illegal for children under 16 to use on our roads and footpaths."

Some school speed zones are permanent and in effect 24/7, while other school speed zones are only operational during certain hours and days. These time-based school speed zones are usually in effect between 8.00am to 9.30am and 2.30pm to 4.00pm weekdays during Victorian school terms (excluding public holidays).

School speed zones are usually reduced to 40km per hour on roads where the regular speed limit is less than 80km per hour. Where the regular speed limit is 80km per hour or more, the school speed zone usually reduces the limit to 60km per hour.

RACV has the following advice for drivers during school pick-up and drop-offs:

- Stay alert: Be patient, aware, and exercise caution when driving through school zones. There will be a lot of excited children walking and riding around roads, car parks and driveways, especially during the busy pick-up and drop-off
- Observe speed limits: Keep a keen eye out for change of speed limits and reduce your speed before entering school speed zones.
- Reduce distraction: Ensure that mobile devices and other distractions are out of reach or turned off while driving.
- Be mindful of school buses: Give way to a bus moving into the traffic and be careful of children exiting and entering buses.
- Consider parking further away: Park your car a few blocks away and walk to encourage a more active lifestyle, while helping to alleviate congestion.
- Consider turning your engine off: Don't idle your engine as you wait. Studies from around the world suggest idling engines in traffic and around schools are detrimental to children's health.
- Use children's crossings or zebra crossings: Look out for the bright orange 'children crossing' flags. Whenever those flags are displayed, road users must stop for any pedestrians waiting to cross. This applies regardless of whether a crossing supervisor is present. Remain stopped until the crossing is clear and do not block crossings.

For more information on road safety around schools visit racv.com.au

Victorian State Government

Nominations open for women's honour roll

The Victorian Government is recognising women who have made outstanding contributions to Victoria through the Victorian Honour Roll of Women.

Victorians are encouraged to nominate women from all walks of life, cultural backgrounds and age groups to be recognised across four categories – Local Champion, Change Agent, Emerging Leader and Trailblazer.

The Victorian Honour Roll of Women celebrates the outstanding contributions made by Victorian women and acknowledges the many ways in which they make lasting contributions to the community. The Honour Roll celebrates their achievements across fields such as social justice, health science, research, arts, environment, law, media and education.

Last year's 21 Honour Roll inductees included folk musician turned Federal-Court judge Judy Small AM, renowned endocrinologist Associate Professor Ada Cheung and Yorta Yorta artist and cultural practitioner, Aunty Rochelle Patten. More than 750 women have been inducted since the Honour Roll of Women began in 2001.

Nominations close on Sunday 16 March. To find out more and nominate yourself or someone you know, visit vic.gov.au/honour-roll-women.

New grants boosting women's health research

For decades, research into health has left women out – because women were seen as too unreliable to participate due to menstruation and hormonal fluctuations.

Now, the State Government is bridging this gap, with a new grants program to advance the understanding of how disease and other health issues effect women – also further cementing Victoria's reputation as a global leader in medical research. The dedicated women's medical research grants program sees $1.5 million Women's Health Research Catalyst Grants open to the sector's best and brightest to apply.

Grants between $50,000 and $150,000 will be awarded for oneyear research initiatives specifically focused on sex and gender comparisons and underfunded or under-researched conditions impacting women.

While all areas of health and medical research will be considered, some target areas have been identified as requiring greater understanding of the influence sex and gender have on these conditions – acknowledging that for women they can be experienced very differently to men. These key areas include sexual and reproductive health, cardiovascular health, oncology, orthopaedics, and chronic pain, among others.

Eligible applicants will need to be from a Victorian Administering Institution and undertaking research in a health and medical field, including discovery, pre-clinical, clinical or lived experience.

This transformation to women's health is also delivering 20 new women's health clinics, expanding our sexual and reproductive health hubs network, doubling the number of laparoscopies for endo and associated conditions and providing scholarships for more than 100 women's specialists.

For more information, please visit health.vic.gov.au/catalyst-grants-womens-health-research-priorities.

More depressing news but we can't ignore this (well we shouldn't, looks like lots of media has).

The rate of ocean surface warming has quadrupled since satellite measurements began

If you're wondering why the last two years were so hot, this is almost half the reason.

Stephen Luntz, Freelance Writer, This article from ILFScience

The surface waters of the oceans are getting warmer at a rate of 0.27°C (0.50°F) a decade, new research shows. This compares with just 0.06°C (0.11°F) in the late 1980s, when we first noticed there was a problem. Although people are more directly affected by temperature rises on land, higher ocean temperatures drive bigger storms and can cause ecosystem collapse. Hotter surface waters make only a small contribution to sea level rise, except where they come in contact with ice sheets, but if deeper waters get warm they expand, and that has to go somewhere.

For a long time our knowledge of ocean surface temperatures was based on data collected by ships that had considerable inaccuracies, and largely ignored areas not on major shipping routes. That changed when we developed satellites that could take the temperature of the entire surface.

This also means that things are going to get worse a lot faster than it would appear if we just project the average rate of warming over the last 40 years into the future. For example, the authors expect more warming in the next 20 years than in the last 40.

Carbon dioxide emissions to hit 429.6 ppm in May 2025, highest in over 2 million years

To limit global warming to 1.5°C, as outlined in the Paris Agreement, the accumulation of CO2 and other greenhouse gases in the atmosphere must first decelerate and then reverse. According to the IPCC, this requires the current CO2 build-up in the atmosphere to slow to approximately 1.8 ppm per year.

The record increase in atmospheric CO2 concentrations was driven by a combination of factors, including record-high fossil fuel emissions, reduced carbon capture by natural sinks such as tropical forests, and massive CO2 releases from wildfires, according to a study by the Met Office. When forests burn, they release vast amounts of stored CO2

What this means

Carbon dioxide in the atmosphere acts as a heat trap, with higher concentrations trapping more heat and gradually raising global temperatures. This leads to increasingly severe impacts, including rising sea levels, more extreme droughts, storms, and floods, as well as harm to wildlife and essential natural systems.

The record-breaking temperatures in 2024, fuelled unrelenting heatwaves, drought, wildfire, storms and floods that killed thousands of people and forced millions from their home.

Climate Safe Rooms Launches

After a successful award-winning pilot program in 2021, we are thrilled to launch the Climate Safe Rooms program to Geelong and surrounding regions. The program supports people with complex healthcare needs that become worse during heatwaves and extreme cold.

One room of the home is modified to ensure it does not become too hot or cold during weather extremes - this may include installing insulation, a reverse cycle air conditioner and solar to offset the running costs.

If you are a home care provider, please contact us to see how you can be involved. Or, to find out if you or a loved one is eligible for this program, visit Climate Safe Rooms on the Geelong Sustainability website.

Thought for the Week

"Do whatever comes your way as you can.

Think as little as possible about yourself.

Think as much as possible about other people.

Dwell on things that are interesting. Since you get more joy out of giving joy to others, you should put a good deal of thought into the happiness that you are able to give."

John Bader, Former U/C Accredited Lay Preacher

Dr Megan Vernon will present her findings on Virtual Fencing at the Koroit Agricultural Field Day

DemoDairy Foundation

Virtual fencing is shaping up to be the next big thing in livestock management, according to a researcher who will present her findings at the Koroit Agricultural Field Day on 22 February.

Senior researcher for the Tasmania Institute of Agriculture, Dr Megan Verdon, says momentum for virtual fencing is growing in Victoria but its use is prevented by historic legislation.

Virtual fencing is allowed in Tasmania where more than 20 per cent of farms now use the technology.

"The rules were put in place before anyone thought we could use electrical stimulus to manage cattle," she said. "Now we have this technology but the laws in some states need to be changed to allow it."

Dr Verdon is being sponsored by the DemoDAIRY Foundation to speak at the Koroit Agricultural Field Day Dr Verdon is being sponsored by the DemoDAIRY Foundation to speak at the Koroit Agricultural Field Day on February 22, to regional farmers and the Southwest Showcase of Dairy Innovation on February 24-25.

Dr Verdon has been researching virtual fencing for eight years but says it's not her role to promote the technology. "The uptake in Tasmania has been amazing and there is a lot of interest around Australia, but my role is to provide data about the benefits or challenges and then leave it up to individual farmers whether or not it's suited," she said. "It's the same with the legislators — I'm focussed on providing the data to help them make decisions."

Her research shows that the technology works and animals are adjusting well to the different management system. "Our research shows that it's not having a negative impact on their welfare,"

Dr Verdon said.

Current research is seeking to quantify the benefits of virtual fencing. "Some benefits are really clear, such as more precise pasture allocation and nutrition for animals, better land management, protecting waterways and pasture utilisation," Dr Verdon said.

"The technology also has behaviour monitoring abilities with alerts of abnormal behaviour which could be an early indicator of illness or injury."

Farmers have found it can free up time for more high-value tasks. "We've had farmers say they've gone on holidays for the first time because they can trust this technology," Dr Verdon said.

Dr Verdon said "I believe the technology can offer significant advantages in terms of environmental management, animal monitoring, and in people's lives. But to ensure we achieve all those benefits, we have to make sure it meets societal perceptions and that it's used in a way that works with the animal."

Dr Verdon has been involved with several different research projects, including how the technology works and how animals interact with it, benefits for pastures, labour and cow health and novel applications of the technology.

Her presentation will also cover her research into the use of cow wearables, including collars, ear tags and stomach boluses, to assist herd management.

Innovation technical presentations and workshops will run through the day at the Koroit Agricultural Field Day on February 22 with a series of presentations/workshops in the basketball stadium. DemoDAIRY Foundation is assisting with this activity.

On Sunday February 23, DemoDAIRY Foundation will host Dr Verdon at a session for farmers east of Warrnambool on both cow wearables and virtual fencing with the time and venue to be confirmed.

She will also present at the Southwest Showcase of Dairy Innovation hosted by Food and Fibre Great South Coast at Deakin University on February 24-25.

Be on the look out for Brown Marmorated Stink Bug

Agriculture Victoria

Agriculture Victoria is encouraging all Victorians to keep a look out for Brown Marmorated Stink Bug (BMSB) to help respond to detections near the international ports and ensure the pest does not establish.

BMSB is a hitchhiker pest that tries to cross our borders by hiding inside imported shipping containers, machinery, goods and packaging - especially between September and April.

Throughout this period, Agriculture Victoria staff conduct visual surveillance and deploy traps around detection points to ensure nothing has escaped and established in the environment. This work is undertaken in collaboration with the Commonwealth Government.

Hundreds of regional Victorians sign open letter to the Australian Energy Regulator asking for upgrades to local energy infrastructure

Farmers for Climate Action

Some 500 regional Victorians have already signed an open letter asking for upgrades to local energy infrastructure, put forward by Farmers for Climate Action - and FCA is asking more people to add their voice.

The open letter is addressed to the Australian Energy Regulator, which must sign off on regional energy infrastructure upgrades such as poles and wires. Farmers for Climate Action is asking those who live on the Powercor Network in Western Victoria, to help fight for a better local network by signing the open letter.

The proposed upgrades include:

- $50 million to upgrade Single Wire Earth Return lines
- $2M for energy literacy programs
- $2.1M for expert energy advisory services
- $4.8M for community-led renewable energy projects
- $5.9M for vulnerable customer assistance to support electrification

Powercor has said these investments would increase bills by only $4 per year.

The open letter follows the Rural and Regional Energy Summit in Bendigo in October 2024 hosted by FCA in partnership with Powercor. The Summit brought together Powercor customers from across Western Victoria to discuss the 2026-31 Regulatory Reset.

FCA CEO Natalie Collard said these upgrades were "a nobrainer".

"Rural and regional Victorians pay the most for electricity yet suffer from the most blackouts," Ms Collard said.

"Rural and regional Victoria produces the electricity our cities use, and rural and regional Victoria deserves the same quality of energy service that cities receive - FCA calls on the Australian Energy Regulator (AER) to back these investments to give regional Victorians fair access to a more reliable energy supply.

Ms Collard said upgrading Single Wire Earth Return (SWER) lines was a clear priority from the summit, with a huge push to improve the lines for more than 3,000 customers.

"We hear stories of farmers paying out of their own pocket to fix powerlines because they aren't getting reliable electricity," Ms Collard said.

"Storms and bushfires made worse and more frequent by climate change are really hard on rural electricity networks. We need governments to invest in local electricity upgrades to keep the network running properly."

VFF (Victorian Farmers Federation) President, FCA board member and Quambatook farmer Brett Hosking said, rural Victorians are already making a significant contribution to the renewable energy shift by hosting transmission lines, wind turbines and solar farms, yet we don't have the infrastructure in our communities to ensure reliable energy to our own homes and businesses."

"As farmers and stewards of the land we are already focused on how we can continue to produce food and fibre while reducing our emissions, but with the current poles and wires we can't even charge an electric car."

"Poll after poll has shown rural and regional people support the energy shift, and we need governments to realise that upgrading our local energy network is part of that energy shift."

Victorian State Government

Australia's first paramedic practitioner laws pass parliament

Legislation to enshrine Australia's first Paramedic Practitioner into law has now passed the Victorian Parliament, paving the way for them to deliver urgent care and prescribe medicines while saving Victorians a trip to hospital.

The Government's Paramedic Practitioners Bill 2024 fulfils a 2022 election commitment, making Victoria the first jurisdiction in Australia to have dedicated legislation to support this role – allowing the delivery of a higher level of care to patients when and where they need it.

Paramedics regularly transfer patients with serious, but not life-threatening, conditions to hospitals. With their new advanced clinical training, Paramedic Practitioners will now be able to assess, diagnose and treat patients in the field, make clinical decisions and take pressure off our busy emergency departments.

The key change will allow Paramedic Practitioners to prescribe and administer scheduled medicines when treating patients, providing Victorians with immediate treatment on the spot.

The first cohort of 30 paramedics is currently progressing through Monash University's nation-leading Paramedic Practitioner master's degree, with a second cohort set to begin in the coming weeks.

Developed in collaboration and consultation with Ambulance Victoria, Safer Care Victoria, paramedics, clinicians and unions, the free master's degree will see these graduates deployed to regional Victoria in 2026.

Once graduated, the Paramedic Practitioners will be equipped to treat conditions that often lead to hospital visits, such as urinary catheter care, wound care and closure, minor infections, dislocations and fractures.

The Government is also supporting the training of 40 additional Mobile Intensive Care Ambulance (MICA) paramedics, that will see Ambulance Victoria welcome their largest cohort of MICA trainees in history.

Building better libraries for Victorians

The Victorian Government is delivering better libraries and library programs for Victorians by upgrading libraries, supporting education programs and delivering mobile library vans across the state.

Public libraries are about much more than reading. They provide free services for communities across Victoria, including internet access and education programs – which is why the Government has invested almost $50 million into 139 library infrastructure projects over the last nine years.

This funding can be used to support library upgrades and services like mobile library vans – reaching readers that would not otherwise have access to library services.

Grant applications are now open until 14 March 2025.

Local medical student leads global initiative to improve healthcare access

Global Village Project

Winchelsea resident and Deakin University medical student Em Stevens is on a mission to make a difference in underserved communities both in Australia and abroad. As the President of the Global Village Project (GVP), Em and her team (pictured below) are excited to share the organization's impactful plans for 2025.

The GVP is a student-led initiative at Deakin University, inspired by the Fiji Village Project established by the Australian National University in 2007. With a focus on improving healthcare access and education, the project connects medical and allied health students with volunteering opportunities to empower vulnerable communities globally. Our mission is to deliver sustainable healthcare solutions through education, community leadership, and hands-on medical aid.

Making an Impact Globally and Locally

The GVP collaborates with organizations such as Jacob's Well Foundation in Odisha, India, to address pressing healthcare needs. Through its India Volunteering Program, Deakin medical students work alongside Australian doctors to conduct health checks, administer vaccinations, and promote hygiene practices in local villages, schools, and hospitals. A special focus will also be placed on oral health and nutrition education.

Closer to home, the Northern Territory Volunteering Program supports rural communities by offering health education workshops in primary schools. The program emphasizes cultural sensitivity and provides medical students with invaluable insights into the unique challenges faced by remote healthcare systems.

We aim to not only deliver aid but also learn from these communities and support their healthcare goals sustainably.

How You Can Help

To ensure the success of these initiatives, the GVP is seeking support from the local community. Donations are needed to fund essential health equipment, teaching resources, and medical supplies for the programs. Every contribution will directly assist rural, disadvantaged communities in Odisha, India and the Northern Territory. Together, we can make a lasting impact through education and healthcare.

For those interested in supporting this meaningful cause, donations of money or gifts are greatly appreciated. To contribute, please visit the GoFundMe page linked below or contact Em Stevens in 0408 185 905 directly for more information.

Be part of stopping violence before it starts in Ballarat

People living in Ballarat are invited to co-design the worldleading 'saturation model', bringing together new and expanded programs, policies and services with a singular focus: to drive down the rates of family violence and men's violence against women.

Minister for Prevention of Family Violence Natalie Hutchins and Respect Victoria today called for people who live and work in Ballarat to register their interest in helping co-design the model that will deliver a new coordinated approach to prevention.

Respect Victoria has been consulting extensively with the community and family violence services in Ballarat to help shape and inform key elements of the model. Now, individuals and organisations are invited to apply for the co-design group, to shape the way the saturation model is rolled out across Ballarat.

The four-year saturation model will bring together every part of the community - from local sporting clubs, workplaces, community, organisations health services, council, schools, emergency services and more - to deliver a new coordinated approach to prevention.

In addition to local programs and services, the four-year saturation model will deliver stronger referral pathways between prevention programs and specialist response services, so people experiencing violence - or seeing early warning signs - can get the help they need as quickly as possible.

No community is immune to violence. It's happening in homes across our state and nation. But because of the heartbreaking loss of three women in Ballarat last year, we know the people of Ballarat are more determined than anyone to put an end to violence.

The working group will meet for face-to-face and online workshops between February and May. Respect Victoria will host community roundtables focused on delivering prevention initiatives locally, open an online platform for community feedback, and recruit 'community connectors' to support further engagement.

This builds on the State Government's package of reforms that will drive action; responding to victims when violence occurs. delivering a stronger justice response that holds offenders to account, and continuing Victoria's world-leading prevention response – stopping violence before it starts.

The model is part of the State Government's Strengthening Women's Safety Package, which includes work to prevent violence and provide tailored responses for women and children who experience family violence, while keeping the focus on holding men who use violence accountable.

Expressions of interest are open until Friday, 7 February 2025. To apply for the co-design group, visit respectvictoria.vic.gov. au/get-involved-in-designing-the-Ballarat-community-saturationmodel

Latest initiatives to power Victoria's music industry

The Victorian Government is backing Victoria's music industry with more gigs and more support for artists to build their music careers locally.

Victorian musicians, bands, music workers and venues will receive a boost with the latest round of the Music Works grants program now open for applications, and the 10,000 Gigs: Victorian Gig Fund opening on 30 January.

The Music Works program provides grants to artists and music workers to support career building projects ranging from writing and recording new music to professional development, touring, marketing and more.

The 10,000 Gigs: Victorian Gig Fund provides grants to venues to stage paid gigs by Victorian artists. Applications will open next week to licensed live music venues or venues that can host live performances in outer-metropolitan or regional Victoria. Venues can apply for up to $11,000 to stage up to 20 gigs.

The Victorian Government has also appointed a 14-member Victorian Music Industry Advisory Council, who will provide expert advice on the challenges and opportunities facing the industry and future proofing Victoria's globally recognised music industry.

LIONS CLUB CLOCK

In 1985 the Council voted to erect a clock tower in conjunction with the local Lions Club at the Geelong approach to the township of Winchelsea.

Many locals objected to the clock tower as a waste of ratepayers' money, its' location was aesthetically bad and it would be a shame if any trees were removed to allow it to be built. At a Shire meeting it was voted nine votes to seven, to support the clock.

The clock was built to coincide with Victoria's 150th anniversary celebrations.

The Lions Club raised $7000 and the balance of $3000 was donated by the Shire.

Council adopted the recommendation that the clock be located on the public library site which was owned by the Shire and that the Winchelsea Lions Club will be responsible for its maintenance. It was resolved that the council would be responsible for the power bill and paying the insurance costs.

At a later date two lions were placed on the top of the clock.

Winchelsea Bowls Club

Julie Johnson

In what has been some warm weather we have seen a remarkable nailbiter finish to set up the Finals in the 2024/25 Pennant season. We have 4 out of 5 Pennant teams in the Finals again this season and if Division 4 had not had the hard knocks of having to forfeit two games due to lack of players it may well have been 5 out of 5. This is once again a fantastic result for a small club who have a great spirit and just keep on pushing the boundaries, let's just hope we can do this again during the Finals.

After about 13 years of this I can tell you that bowls is just so much more than putting a bowl on the green and getting it close. Over and above all it is how the teams work supportively together, if they stay together and if they don't how an individual and team can adapt to changes and challenges of which there are many throughout the season.
